

BRUENING IN RADIO APPEAL FOR HARMONY

urges France to Forget War and Work for World
Cooperation

Berlin — (AP) — Chancellor Bruening's personal stock went up many points over night in Germany as the result of his dramatic radio appeal to France to forget the war and engage in cooperative efforts to pull the world out of its economic rut. The German public was believed to realize that for the first time radio had been used for political action of the first magnitude. The chancellor's address was commended not only in political and diplomatic circles but also in business and financial quarters. The chancellor is known to feel keenly the embarrassment suffered by the government's work of international reconciliation by the steel helmets convention at Breslau on May 1 and the militaristic utterances at lunch last Friday. Last night's broadcast gave him an opportunity to state authoritatively while thousands of Frenchmen listened that Germany earnestly and fervently desires rapprochement with France.

"These two neighbor nations," he said, "the radio audience, hold the peace of Europe, if not the world, in their hands and offered once more to the world a friendly conference of French officials similar to the recent Anglo-German meeting at Neuquien."

Must Meet Needs
The well-being of Europe and of the whole world," he said, "depends on whether those who, by the tragic fate, became enemies in the world war are determined now on both sides to take the vital steps which the dire need of this hour demands. The American proposal paves the way to the great goal if the nations respond to that initiative in the same noble spirit in which it was conceived."

"The greater the alleviation of economic and social distress under which the German nation is suffering, the stronger will be the nation's ability to aid in the construction of a bulwark of peace and order. In the past certain obstacles and difficulties have marked the course on both sides and if there has been any stormy argument, still it is my conviction that this can be overcome with goodwill on both sides. There will be no lack of goodwill on the part of the German government. I would welcome the opportunity for discussions such as that recently held at Chequers. The problems confronting France and Germany are too vague and too urgent for both of us not to permit frank discussion on some common ground from which we could launch an attack."

The chancellor's address was announced only an hour before it was given and created great surprise in Germany.

HAPMAN TO SPEAK AT THREE MEETINGS

Daniels farm in the town of Clover and on Thursday evening there will be a meeting at the Leland Peep farm, near Bovina. Funds raised through the program will be used to aid club members to camp. Mrs. Charles Skenadore is leader of the club and Roger Sweet is assisting as the leader's work.

The license fee is $5 for each year and $2 for each retail store at handles milk.

LAW PERMITS COLLEGES TO OWN MORE PROPERTY

A measure strongly supported by officials of Lawrence college was signed yesterday by Governor Philip LaFollette. The new statute provides that smaller colleges of the state may hold title to 80 instead of 40 acres of land. Officials of Beloit, Carroll and Ripon colleges also supported the measure. The claim was made that all of the educational institutions named are now needing large tracts of ground for college purposes. The 40 acres that they could hold prior to the passage of the present law did not give sufficient campus room. There was no opposition to the bill although the acquisition of the additional lands means a lessening of the property on the tax rolls of the cities in which the colleges are located.

CITY'S HEALTH SLATE STILL CLEAN, REPORT

Appleton's health slate, kept remarkably free from contagion marks during the entire winter and spring, is still encouragingly clean, Dr. P. P. Dohearty, city physician, stated this morning. At present there is only one case of diphtheria which will be released as soon as cultures can be taken, and a few cases of minor children's diseases, such as chicken pox and measles. There is one case of diphtheria in the town of Grand Chute, quite near the Appleton line.

CALL ATTENTION TO STATE LAWS ON FIREWORKS

Police Chief Points Out That Statutes Regarding Sale
Will Be Enforced

A warning was issued this week by Captain P. J. Vaughn, acting chief of police here, that Appleton storekeepers must conform to the state regulations regarding the sale of fireworks and firecrackers. Captain Vaughn said he is instructing the officers to strictly enforce the laws.

Last year a large quantity of fireworks and firecrackers was seized and confiscated under the new law, which went into effect Aug. 5, 1929. This law still is operative, the police chief said.

This law provides that the only kinds of fireworks which can be sold, stored, or used in this state are firecrackers not more than two inches in length and not more than three-eighths of an inch in diameter, colored fire in covered containers, light torches with lightning ends covered, fountains, flower pots and display wheels, throwing a display not more than six feet and uncolored sparklers not more than 10 inches in length overall and three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter.

Possession of fire balloons, mortars, explosive canes, toy pistols, any contrivance using explosive caps, any article containing compound of mercury or yellow phosphorus, or any firecrackers or fireworks larger than those listed above is positively prohibited.

The larger displays may be obtained only by public authorities or private individuals, who obtain special permit and file a $5,000 bond.

The law also provides that fireworks and firecrackers shall not be kept in the neighborhood of any gasoline pump or storage place. Penalties for violation of the law are severe and offenders may get both a fine and jail sentence.

Home Economics Club Achievement Day Here Next Saturday

EXPECT 300 TO 400 WOMEN WILL ATTEND SESSION

State Club Leader and State Head of Women's Clubs to Be Speakers

The program for the annual achievement day for members of Outagamie county home economics clubs has been completed by Miss Harriet Thompson, county home demonstration agent. It will be held here at Wilson Junior high school at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Between 300 and 400 women are expected to attend.

This event marks the end of another year's program for the rural women under the Thompson extension. The county demonstration agent was engaged, upon approval of the county board two years ago, after a large group of rural women had appeared before the board and made a request for such a worker. Miss Thompson's salary is paid partly by the state and partly by the county.

Members of home economics clubs are urged by Miss Thompson to bring their friends and families along to Appleton for the event, which will last all day.

The program will open with community singing. At 10:15 there will be a game in which all women will participate. This will be followed at 10:30 by a 4-H demonstration, "Helpful Hints on Stain Removal" by the Happy Hearts 4-H club; Miss Dorothy Slevort is leader of the club. At 11 o'clock Miss Thompson will submit a report on county work, especially covering the progress made by the women's groups this year. At 11:15 there will be a home talent play, "Of Course," by the Golden Hill club.

Following the play there will be a piano duet by Mrs. R. H. Gehlke and Mrs. J. Sanders of the club at Black Creek. At noon there will be a picnic lunch served in the gymnasium of the school.

The afternoon program will open at 1:15 with a play by the Seymour club. This will be followed by an address by Mrs. Nellie Kedzie Jones, state home economics leader. Then will follow musical numbers by the Medina group. Mrs. H. F. Bartlett, state president of the Federated Women's clubs, will then give a talk on domestic science, followed by a vocal duet by Mrs. Elmer Root and Mrs. J. Halla of Stephentown. The program will close with the presentation of a play, "Mrs. H. Rip Van Winkle Wakes Up." This play was written and coached by Mrs. E. O. Mueller. Mrs. Miller is being assisted by the following clubs: Appleton, Workers, Greenville, Let's Go Grangers, Menasha, Sunny View, Greenville, Rural Advancement, Greenville, Woodlawn, Grand Chute, Whiting Pines, Appleton, and Greenville.

The retailers heard reports on the trade expansion sale last week, all of which were highly favorable and indicating the city was in a boom. The committee which planned the sale recommended that the event be held annually or semi-annually.

John Neller, as chairman of a committee of retailers concerned with retail district parking problems, was asked to develop a report on the downtown situation. It will be prepared to submit it to the chamber board of directors at their next meeting. Other members of the committee are J. C. Franzen and Karl Haugen.

Moves Business To Small Village To Find Peace

BY DEXTER H. TEED
NEA Service Writer
Lebanon, Ind.—"If I should die tomorrow who would be my pallbearers?"

Henry C. Ulen, internationally known contractor, asked his wife that question. They sat in a luxurious suite in a New York hotel at the time. They had everything money could buy. But their thoughts were not there.

Although neither spoke each knew that the other was visualizing a little town out in Indiana where the sun shone down over cornfields and in the gloaming locusts sang in the sycamore trees. Friends were there, and peace and quiet. That was Lebanon, in which both were born.

Ulen answered his own question, answered it quickly because he is a man who makes decisions quickly.

"My business, as it is," he said, "my business, as it is, would be my pallbearers. None of the boys who knew as children would be here."

That influenced the decision he then made. He sized up the situation rapidly. It was characteristic of him. During the past 30 years his company has constructed railroads, dams and public works all over the world, valued at $1,000,000,000. And often he has been called upon to determine quickly the expenditure of millions.

"We're going back," he said decisively. "And when I say 'we' I mean everything, our offices, our engines and their families and you and I."

Ulen accomplished what for men with less energy and training would have been impossible. He achieved something highly significant in age when the movement is from country to city, by moving en masse the headquarters of a gigantic corporation back to the town of his birth.

The roar and rush of New York was replaced by the easy-going quiet of Central Indiana. The raucous shouts of newboys died to the hum of bees. The rattle and clatter of traffic was left behind.

"Hank" Ulen, who as a youngster was the town "bad boy," has proved that big business can operate in a small town, and he has started other business men wondering if, after all, it is necessary to work in towering office buildings in hearts of cities to succeed.

After he left for Chicago $1200 in debt with only $125 in cash, Ulen came back to Lebanon at intervals. It was home. Now it's home forever. He has built an addition to the house in which he lived. In it are modern offices where his men work. Wires connect it with New York and Chicago. Cables are received from distant lands every day.

Out in the eastern edge of the town he built a sub-division with boulevards, fine English-type homes. He put in sewerage systems, electric lights, started a nursery to grow shrubbery, built an 18-hole golf course and splendid clubhouse, and all accessories.

Ulen has his staff. The development was started less than three years ago. More than $1,000,000 has been expended. Now on the very cornfields and "hog wallows" where "that Ulen boy" played village on unsuspecting farmers the village of Ulen stands. It is incorporated, has a village board and other officials. It is doubtful if there is a finer village in America.

Lebanon, a town of 7000 population, "has perked up" since "Hank" Ulen came back. Business is better. The effects of the depression haven't been felt much. It supports a daily paper—"The Lebanon Record." The stores are large and flourishing. Business men play golf afterwards.

The "bad boy" has turned out to be the finest influence to affect the village in all its history.

But Ulen wasn't really bad anyway. He was just bubbling over with unharmed energy which found outlet in surprising ways. He and his teacher disagreed when he was in the fifth grade. Out the school house door little "Hank" ran—and didn't come back.

Was Hobo at 18
Until he was 18 years old he lived where he desired. He rode freights all over the country. He made a living by washing dishes, selling papers or at manual labor. Sometimes he would come home but the wanderlust had been felt much. It supports a daily paper—"The Lebanon Record." The stores are large and flourishing. Business men play golf afterwards.

Now associated with such national figures as Marshall Field, G. E. Balch and T. S. Shepperd, he is head of one of the largest contracting firms in the world. His firm built the Shandaken tunnel for New York's water system, longest continuous tunnel in the world; the Athens (Greece) waterworks, gigantic dams in various parts of the world and railroads in Persia and across the Andes in South America. His firm is internationally famous.

His fame hasn't made any difference. He's "Hank" Ulen in Lebanon. He lives in his fine home in "Ulen town" with his wife and plays golf with the men with whom he played as boys 50 years ago. He is 50 years old now.

"Some of the boys thought I couldn't manage things here in Lebanon," he explained, his eyes lighting up. "But I fooled them."

He declares the office here has been operated more efficiently than it was in New York. His "boys" work better. They have fewer distractions. They aren't forced to commute and ride on trains two hours a day. They are happier. And so is Ulen and his family. What more could he ask?

RELIEF BILL IS EXPLAINED BY WILLIAMS

Old Age Pension Act Outlined by Judge Heinemann for Officials

The meaning and importance of the public relief bill which recently failed of passage in the assembly and the old age pension which will go into state-wide effect in 1933, were the highlight discussions at the afternoon session of the annual convention of the Wisconsin Association of Public Relief Officials here yesterday at city hall. Aubrey Williams, general secretary of the State Conference of Social Work, Madison, discussed the legislation on public relief, and Judge Fred V. Heinemann explained the old age pension from the standpoint of its six years operation in Outagamie county.

In connection with the public relief bill which will be presented to the next legislature two years from now, the association adopted a resolution to cooperate with the state social service bureau in obtaining research data from ten representative counties in Wisconsin which will give a thorough and straightforward study of relief in these counties.

The substitute amendment of the original bill which confronted the legislature, according to Mr. Williams, completely left out the important administrative machinery such as making the county system mandatory, selecting commissioners through a standard of qualifications and insuring the tenure of office for officials who prove themselves worthy of their work.

Favors County System
Mr. Williams believes that all poor relief should be placed under a county system in place of the present prevailing township system which he pointed out has the strength of the men who administer the relief. In his opinion, a mandatory county centralization of relief would have been passed by the state if it had been put to a public vote. The opposition to this part of the proposed measure came largely from the large cities, which maintain their own relief, and the townships. Another system worked out as an alternative to the county system was opposed by the large cities. This was a system whereby cities of 20,000 or above population would be separate units in poor relief with the other cities coming under county jurisdiction.

"The sooner Wisconsin puts its relief on any other basis than the township, the sooner it will have success in its problems," he said.

"The work should be placed in the hands of the supervision of a capable person engaged to do this work as his job."

The biggest objection to establishing certain qualifications for the office of commissioner, he declared, came from those in office who might be unable to qualify for the position. Mrs. Williams assured the commissioners that the qualifications would not be exceedingly hard, but nevertheless a standard by which the personnel engaged in relief work could be chosen. By establishing a tenure of office, he pointed out that the good men in the work could be kept permanently if they knew that they could not be put out of office except in case of inefficiency.

Significant points in the measure charge the relief commission with the right to anticipate the breakdown of the family, outline the duties of the commissioners, which include an investigation of each case before any family can be given county aid, allow the county to make loans to unemployed or needy cases and attempt to keep records uniform throughout the state.

Approves Small Loans
Mr. Williams declared that relief is given to families particularly and to the commission working with the families under the plan, perhaps the aid at the right time would prevent a breakdown of the family. He also encouraged the making of loans with a small percent of interest to needy people whose self respect makes them hesitate to ask for food and clothing. These loans would be extended to those whose dependency was caused by illness or unemployment.

He explained that this relief law would appropriate funds to the commission for work in the field and would give a relief commission the right to obtain information concerning relatives who are legally liable for financial assistance to dependent persons from trust companies, benefit associations and banks. Under such a law the commission may receive deeds and mortgages on behalf of municipalities from dependent persons in whom aid is being extended. It provides for penalties for persons who falsely obtain aid and provides that a widow, divorcee or deserted woman may choose to make her home where she was left by her husband and may acquire another settlement of her own choosing. Since there has been no provision under the present law for a woman to be treated as a transient.

Mr. Williams favors the concentration of all assistance under one general head including soldier, dependent, out-door and old age relief.

"Economy is one reason for a unification of this sort," he said. "It is coming more and more to the time when every county will be charged with the responsibility of all these inter-related phases of relief work."

Statewide Importance
"Public relief in the state will run into $7,000,000 next year and may take third place in public work of the state. It is fourth in public school work, first in building of good roads second, and the upkeep of penal institutions third. It has an importance in a state program.

SENATE COMMENDS PRESIDENT HOOVER FOR DEBT ACTION

Madison —(P)—The senate today adopted a resolution commending President Hoover for his debt moratorium proposal.

Sen. Walter Goodland, Racine conservative, introduced the measure and it was supported, 23 to 9, by Sen. Herman H. H. Iowa Progressive, moved rejection of the resolution on the ground that it was too early to decide the effects of the proposed moratorium.

Senators John Anderson, Barron; A. M. Miller, Kaukauna; Glenn R. Bailey, Madison; Walter Rush, Neillsville; Fred Zantow, Baraboo and Severson, all Progressives, voted against the resolution, as did Eugene Clifford, Juneau, Democrat and Thomas Duncan and Walter Polakowski, Milwaukee Socialists.

KOLB LEADER OF OPTIMIST CLUB

Organization to Receive Charter at Meeting Next Tuesday

Dr. C. L. Kolb was elected president of the Optimist club at the organization meeting of the group at the Conway hotel Tuesday evening. The club will be granted its charter at a meeting next Tuesday night when it will be attended by the international president, the district governor, and 100 optimists from Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa.

Other officers elected were George Buesing, first vice president, Major Fred Hoffman, second vice president, Ben Cherkas, secretary, Earl Weimer, treasurer, and Dr. L. H. Dillon, sergeant-at-arms. Dr. Kolb was elected delegate to the international convention at Detroit, Mich., July 11 to 13. Dr. Dillon was named alternate. Members of the board of directors are W. H. Gmeiner, Charles Brown, C. C. Bailey, and the Rev. F. C. Renter.

In a meeting next Tuesday the international president, Robert A. Thompson, from the international office at St. Louis, and David Onan, St. Paul, governor of the ninth district, will be speakers and there will be guests from Milwaukee, Sheboygan, Racine, Kenosha, Waukegan, Madison, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Waterloo, Ia. A dance will follow the dinner.

and should be treated with as much consideration as the building of a school.

"There is a need for a state definition of dependency and relief, so that clear-cut statutes may be behind work in the state, county and city."

In discussing the old age pension, Judge Heinemann advised county officials to study the pension in the various counties which already have adopted it, since it will become state-wide in 1933.

"There is nothing sentimental about the system," he declared. "It is a humane, decent and economical way to take care of a certain class of people whom you would have to care for anyway. It is really a question of whether a county desires to care for its aged in a public institution under supervision and let them die as paupers or allow them to spend the last years of their life in their surroundings among their friends and associates."

The adoption of an old age pension does not do away with the poor farm, he pointed out. The pension cares for people at the age of 70 or more.

Judge Heinemann criticized the lack of interest on the part of many modern sons and daughters who fail to assist their parents after a life time of worry for their existence and education. Many children now, he said, want to become professional people and after their families give them an education they spend several years working in their fathers' business and then they want to get away from their parents when they are old.

Believes In Law
"If the law is rightly done the sons and daughters will be forced to take care of their parents. With a community fund a pension will stand on its own merit."

The work of the pensions is handled through the county judge. In some cases the money is partly collected back, especially when the people have small homes for which the county is made trustee. By this measure the property will not revert to the hands of relatives or children who should have properly cared for the aged people. In this way part of the money expended on these recipients of pensions will revert to the pension fund after their death.

The pension is operating in 17 states. Under the new system the judge is to have the right of review of the pension and to share the expenses with the state and municipality. Judge Heinemann stated that only the United States, China and India have not a national policy for the aged. He gave statistics for Outagamie county that show the pension an economic success as well as a humane one. Since its adoption six years ago with the first county expenditures no more money has been put in the pension fund. The rush for pensions is in the first few months after its adoption, Judge Heinemann said. The greatest problem is to weed out the worthy from the unworthy since there are always people who try to get as much as they can for nothing. After the first expenditure the fund remains stationary because this group falls off as fast as it increases, he pointed out.

WON'T DEPART FROM OUTLINES OF DEBT PLAN

Stimson Says Basic Principles of Hoover Program Must Be Unchanged

answer to the suspension suggestion would be in Washington by tonight. Officials were especially anxious to have that reply, and in the meanwhile reserved formal comment on Laval's statement that the Young plan, the law of the land, cannot be suspended for a year without loss.

MAKE COUNTER PROPOSAL
Paris —(P)—The French government concentrated on its reply to President Hoover's monetary plan today with special attention to counter-proposal designed to aid Germany in conformity with the Young plan.

Officials took into consideration information furnished by American Ambassador Walter E. Edge as to the circumstances surrounding the formulation of the offer for a one year suspension of inter-governmental war debts. Mr. Edge called on premier Laval last night and told him that France was the first nation to be informed of the proposal.

President Hoover was obliged to take speedy action when acquainted with the financial crisis existing in Germany, he said, and France was misinformed if she believed that he had previously negotiated with other governments to her exclusion.

The ambassador's visit was actuated by a speech before the chamber of deputies in which Deputy Louis Marin said that the Hoover proposal would sweep the Young plan and hinted that France had been ignored in preliminary steps.

The Hoover proposal continued to receive acrid comment in extreme right organs. Pertinax said in Echo de Paris that the United States had treated France "most cavalierly" on the fifteenth of June by calmly collecting half of the regular annuity, a sum which he said was much greater than the amount received from Germany since April 1.

Two days later America no less calmly invited France to suspend German reparations he said, "which was unfortunate coincidence."

France, there was immense interest when the French cabinet met today as to whether it would adhere to its counter-plan for aiding Germany, which was elaborated yesterday and communicated to Ambassador Edge last night.

This conditional acceptance is based upon France's belief that the Young plan is sound in its financial structure and that it should not be interfered with. She holds that the Bank for International Settlements should be the intermediary for the reception of Germany's unconditional annuities and that the money should be used by the bank for financing Germany and other European nations such as Austria.

Britain Approves
London —(P)—Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, told the house of commons today that the British government subscribing wholeheartedly to the principle of President Hoover's proposal, prepared to cooperate in elaboration of the detail with a view of giving it practical effect without delay.

"The more consideration we give to the president's declaration," he said, "the more it seems to us, having regard particularly to the history of the matter, that that declaration is a very great gesture on the part of the United States and that it would be thousands of pities if Europe does not respond to it in the same spirit."

"The beneficial effect of the proposal may be less unless steps are taken by all the countries concerned to give prompt and practical effect. This is peculiarly the case as regards Germany who, after all, is in an essential difficulty."

"We agree with the view expressed by the United States government that there is no time for a conference. A more prompt method must be found for putting into operation the proposal of the United States government for a complete and immediate suspension of German payments to the creditor governments."

"The procedure which we would favor is that the creditor governments should forthwith notify the Bank for International Settlements that they agree with the proposal for suspension for one year of all the German payments due them."

"The decision of course does not rest with us alone and we are awaiting the views of the other creditor governments, but we hope it may be agreed with the agreement on these lines as soon as possible."

"President Hoover's proposal applies, however, to all inter-governmental debts, reparations and relief debts." His majesty's government for their part accept this proposal in the spirit as well as the letter. They will accordingly be ready to suspend for one year all such inter-governmental debts due to them as soon as President Hoover's proposal has been generally accepted.

50 RELIEF OFFICIALS HERE FOR CONVENTION

More than 50 poor commissioners registered here for the annual convention of the Wisconsin Association of Public Relief Officials, which closed today. The group met this morning at city hall to start on a tour of Appleton and its environs. The commissioners visited the city poor home, Riverview, the Little Chute and other points of interest. They attended a fish fry at Stroebe's island at noon and spent the afternoon at theatre parties. William Lyons, Appleton commissioner, was in charge of the program plans for the group.

FARM PROJECTS ARE INSPECTED BY COMMITTEE

Make Trip to Eight Farms to Look at Improvement Attempts

The county agricultural committee, accompanied by Gus Sell, county agent, yesterday made a trip through the county visiting nine places at which farm improvement projects are being carried out as part of the county farm improvement program. Among some of the projects inspected were: forestry, hill terracing, fertilizer, emergency hays, landscaping, windbreaks, soils improvement, installation of a model septic tank and erection of a safety bull pen.

Before the committee started on its trip it discussed briefly plans for the 4-H club camp next month; fertilizer and forestry projects under progress; and plans for a program of contagious abortion control. The places visited by the committee included about one-fourth the territory of the county.

In the morning the committee visited at the county asylum farm, where a fertilizer project on grains and alfalfa is being carried out; the E. O. Mueller farm, town of Grand Chute, where a windbreak was installed by planting trees and where a model septic tank was built; and the Greenville Grange hall, where the grounds were beautified by landscaping with natural shrubbery.

In the afternoon the committee visited the following places: Edward Hassinger farm, town of Greenville, where emergency hay crops of peas and soybeans have been planted; Jamison Brothers farm, town of Greenville, where a model bull pen has been constructed and a hillside terraced to prevent erosion; Arnold Roessler farm, town of Dale, where a soil improvement project is being carried out; Len Van Straten farm, town of Greenville, and the Leand Peep farm, town of Boyce, where fertilizer projects are being carried out.

"They made a beautiful landing," said an official at the airfield. "It was just like a bird. The machine was wonderful and it looked wonderful. The take-off was 'very sweet.' Despite their grunting flight and heavy load the ship did not have the slightest trouble getting into the air. It certainly didn't act like a ship carrying too heavy a load."

It was not until the airman was within 200 miles of the coast of Ireland that they were able to get their bearings.

"We passed through a cloudbank at a great height, so we swooped down below it," said Post. "We were surprised to find water under us for we thought turning the time we had been above the clouds that we actually were flying over Europe. When we saw the sea we decided to carry on until we struck land. Later we noticed what appeared to be crossroads and agreed to make a landing."

"When the machine came to a standstill, we were surprised to learn we were at a royal air force station in England. Conditions, as soon as we reached Ireland, were not so good as when we were over the Atlantic. There was fog and rain, but I suppose we shall encounter plenty of that before we reach our goal. We set out to fly the Atlantic in 18 hours and we have done it in less so naturally we are delighted. The machine has given no trouble and we are confident we shall succeed in our effort."

Echo Gives 'Sound Picture' Of Ground To Lost Aviator

Washington —(P)—Echoes are now harnessed to enable aviators to land in dense fog.

A new altimeter, developed by army air corps and General Electric engineers, automatically measures the altitude of a plane by the time taken for a whistle blast to make a round trip between the ship and ground.

The device, tested by fliers piloting in covered cockpits, is constructed by the air corps to be the last link of a series of contrivances developed to best the airman's worst enemy, fog.

Radio beacons chart "paths" an airman may follow to his destination. Automatic pilots, the artificial horizon, and other blind-flying aids make level flight possible when the ground is obscured, but the greatest problem has been to land at night or in a fog-bound airport with a sonic altimeter, is patterned after the sonic depth finders which have found wide use in water craft for soundings and have enabled scientists to chart hitherto unknown depths of the seas.

Aircraft equipment includes a pressure tank, a whistle, a transmittal and receiving megaphone joined by a tube, a measuring the altitude in feet, and a stethoscope fitting into the pilot's ears.

A blast from the whistle is magnified by one megaphone pointed to the ground and the reflected sound caught on the rebound by the receiving megaphone.

The dial automatically registers the altitude according to elapsed interval but below 50 feet the time between blast and echo is so short that a stethoscope is employed.

Between four or five feet above the ground the notes blend as one warning the pilot to level off his plane for the landing. Over clear ground the echo sounds sharply but over trees the echo is muffled.

The tube joining the two megaphones allows the pilot to hear the blast of the whistle as the sound leaves the plane, enabling him to know the interval between blast and echo.

Equipment has been mounted on several planes but new work is to be undertaken to simplify the apparatus and reduce the weight.

Grace, Newfoundland, and then hoped over the Atlantic.

As they stepped from their machine to be greeted cordially by the British airman, Post said:

"We had a right good flight. It has been a splendid trip throughout. In truth it has been a real joy trip. The only difficulty we experienced was over a period of three or four days during the early stages of the flight when the weather was so bad. The rest of the journey was so enjoyable and the sea was calm. We are now well ahead of our time and are off for Moscow via Berlin."

Declaring that they were out to break all records for a flight around the world, Post said they were anxious to reach Moscow by tomorrow and no time could be wasted. If their fuel held out, he added, they might not even halt at Berlin which is 700 miles from Chester. The flight from Berlin to Moscow is 925 miles.

The machine was refused to land at this point.

Peted by Aviators
The Americans were taken to the Royal Air force mess where they lunched while their plane was being refueled. They seemed anxious to resume their flight without any delay and after carefully inspecting the machine, the "Winnie

Diggers Uncover Ancient
Royal Governor's Palace

Williamsburg, Va.—Digging into mounds and weedy banks here ex-cavators have uncovered foundations and floors of the royal governor's palace and a mysterious passage-way suggesting a secret exit for the king's rulers of Virginia in the pre-Revolutionary days.

The palace, erected about 1700, one of the first buildings in the old capital, was considered the finest structure in America until it was destroyed by fire shortly after the Revolution. In the years since then the ruins have been completely covered by earth and vegetation. Recently
John D. Rockefeller, Jr., started restoration.

Marble Floors
Several feet under the present surface workmen's picks struck the foundations. These have been uncovered, little damaged by the ravages of time. Even the marble floor, on which dignified colonial gentlemen

in powdered wigs bowed gallantly to beautiful ladies, was found intact.
In attempting to locate the old deer park and formal gardens in the rear, skeletons of 80 men were discovered. It is thought they were buried there after dying in the palace, which was used as a hospital
during the siege of Yorktown.

The mysterious passageway was found when workmen dug into a tree-covered mound near the palace.
As they probed downward into the earth and scooped up shovel after shovel of dirt they at last uncovered a brick-walled opening.

Mystery Tunnel
Around it was a wooden doorway opening into a 15-foot tunnel. From the tunnel, penetrating inward and downward, was a bricklined shaft about 12 feet in diameter. Their imaginations stimulated by the discovery, the excavators continued digging—hoping that they might find an underground chamber or some hidden retreat which would solve the riddle of the passage.

They are still digging. Down some 35 feet now, they have not reached the end of the shaft, nor have archaeologists been able to determine for what purpose it was used.
The suggestion has been made, however, that it may have been a secret exit from the palace 200 yards away, used by the king's governors in escaping from danger.
As the excavating continues, interest in the project is increasing,
many hoping that unguessed secrets of colonial intrigue and the royal rulers will be discovered. The restoration will be continued until all important features of the palace and surroundings are again revealed.

Los Angeles—(AP)—Six of 15 former officials of Romola Inc., were convicted of using the mails to defraud in California and Arizona land development enterprises, and sentenced late today by U. S. Judge John M. Killits to prison terms ranging from 12 years to 15 months.
Thirty were indicted and 20 were tried in a trial lasting from March 3.
In addition to a 12-year sentence in

McNeil island penitentiary, Alexander Hursh, former president of the $19,000,000 concern, was sentenced to pay a fine of $4,200.
Sentences are to be imposed tomorrow on eight other defendants, including E. G. Phillips, Chicago
promoter.
J. J. Murphy, Chicago broker, was among the five acquitted.
Testimony said that contracts for Romola lands were sold throughout the country for $21,000,000. Eleven million dollars, it was testified, was actually taken in by the company, and the evidence indicated that only $3,900,000 of that money was put into development work, $8,000,000 being used, the prosecution contended,
"for expenses."

FAIR ELECTIONS ACT

The people will be sorely disappointed if the legislature is unable to solve the present deadlock over the enactment of a corrupt practices act.

Practically all members of the legislature are agreed that the present law, written about thirty years ago, is inadequate as a political guide for the state. The state has plainly outgrown it. But it has become impossible for these differing opinions to agree upon the measure of improvement that shall be made.

Of course there must be a limitation put upon the amount of money that may be used in a campaign, but opinions vary widely as to what the limitation should be. Some members of the legislature appear to overlook the fact that Wisconsin has something like 56,000 square miles of territory and nearly 1,000,000 people qualified to vote. They appear to forget that if it is right for a candidate to spend $100 for a certain form of advertisement or propaganda it could hardly be inherently criminal did he spend $200 for the same thing in an enlarged or more prominent manner. They overlook, we believe, that the basic and all important fact concerning the use of money in elections has to do with the purpose for which it is used and not, within reason, the amount used.

Wisconsin needs a fair and vigorous corrupt practices act, one constructed in practical fashion, without political feeling or animosity and with some understanding and appreciation of human nature. The man who occupies office, if any distinction is to be made, should not be permitted to spend the amount to be spent by him who strives for that office. The occupant always has a great start in the race. That will become self-evident when President Hoover, if he lives, will be almost unanimously renominated on the Republican ticket.

Even if the senate and assembly cannot agree upon an entirely new bill they should make certain changes in the law, liberalizing it in much needed respects and making it more plain in others, so that the course of their labors will not result in an absolute zero, as at present appears to be the case.

The very name of this act indicates the bitter partisanship and intense personal feeling that have been its constant companions, reflecting the mistaken conviction of its framers that they alone were chaste and immaculate and those politically opposed to them tainted with foul venality, in other words that the opposition is always corrupt, indulges in corrupt practices and the law must be framed to stop whatever it does.

A more sensible name for the enactment would be "Fair Elections Act." It is better to look at the skies than down in the mud.

GOVERNMENTAL SUBSIDIES

Pacifists may find additional cause for criticism in the governmental subsidies being paid to aviation and the merchant marine in our mail contracts. Postmaster-General Brown announces that one of the main reasons for the government's substantial support of these industries is their extreme importance in the matter of national defense.

In aviation the government is now expending $17,000,000 per year in air mail contracts and paying American steamship companies $19,000,000 annually for carrying United States' mails.

Governmental receipts from the air mail pay for less than one-half the cost of handling. The balance is a subsidy paid on air mail contracts without which commercial aviation would be far behind its present state. It has made possible the extension of daily service to 23 domestic air mail routes totaling more than 22,000 miles, and over foreign lines of approximately 18,000 miles. The air mail, allied with commercial aviation, is developing efficient and fast airplane and training a flying personnel which will be immediately available in time of war.

Mail contracts to the merchant marine on a mileage basis specify that during the ten year period they are effective, 100 fast cargo and passenger ships must be built. Under this program 24 ships have already been constructed and 24 others are now on the ways in various shipyards.

Payments are high but the government expects compensation by having a merchant marine which will provide insurance against the hazards of trade competition and the danger of foreign aggression. It does not expect to find itself in the helpless condition existing in 1917 and 1918.

No criticism of the government's policy as to these subsidies can be justly offered, for these two industries are generally conceded to be essential to our national progress. Besides there is the element of national pride in keeping pace with the rest of the world on the sea and in the air.

FEDERAL LAWS

The public may have reassured faith that the violation of federal laws is no monkey business, not a trifling matter by any means. Defiance of laws, both state and federal, by bands of criminals and racketeers has been common practice for altogether too long a time.

The impossibility of obtaining convictions for flagrant law violations in some of our large municipalities has produced quite plausible innuendoes that the gangster tills were tapped liberally for the purchase of stumbling blocks to the march of justice.

The old-time, before-the-war respect for federal laws was not only on the wane but had sunk, in spots, below the horizon. The ease with which offenders against the national prohibition laws escaped punishment, only to continue in the same business, added to the disrespect for and disregard of all federal laws. Racketeers began to reason that federal laws had feet of clay too.

The department of justice crew which brought to a definite issue the Chicago gangster violations of the income tax and prohibition laws, is a bright and shining example of what honest officers of the law can do if given proper support by superiors.

In an effort to break up the organized criminal gangs of our large cities, the department of justice elected to make the fight on income tax evasions and prohibition conspiracies. Attorney General Mitchell announced some time ago that the whole strength of the government at Washington would be employed. And he meant business. Action followed and the results are tickling the sensibilities of Mr. Average Citizen sitting on the side lines and viewing the passive disfigurement of local law enforcers whose pre-election speeches of promised clean-ups were so often "placed on the table" for further consideration.

Part of the Chicago federal crew is now moving on New York. Advance billings of their coming performance in that city are reported to have resulted in a flood of belated income tax returns from repentant racketeers who hope to escape the penalty by quick confession.

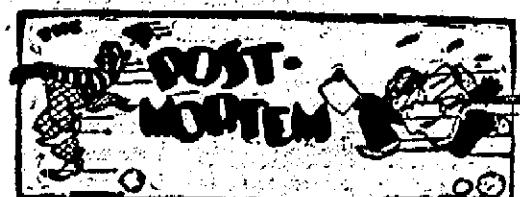

The public is gratified at the progress made. Beer runners, rum dealers, narcotic peddlers and racketeers of all descriptions must realize that the arm of the federal law is still long and has a powerful grip. The department of justice is doing a big job. It is helping to destroy a cynical and defiant attitude toward American criminal law procedure. It is making plain that neither terrorism nor corruption can halt the legal processes of the federal authorities.

Opinions Of Others

HERE'S A RAY OF REAL SUNSHINE

The United States, in the opinion of those who may be considered best able to interpret financial statistics, stands as a nation awaiting some accredited signal to make a great industrial and commercial advance. The uncertainty and restraint of the recession have had the salutary effect of affording time for debt-paying, while the hesitancy to make investments or to enter upon business enterprises, has resulted in a tremendous increase in the volume of savings. "So far this year," says Hugh Bancroft, New York financial writer, "we haven't been buying very much, but we have been getting out of debt very fast. From Oct. 1, 1929 to April 1, 1931, 18 months of depression, we have been absorbing $550,000,000 net of new securities each month, and have been paying off loans on securities at the rate of $400,000,000 a month. It seems clear that we are individually saving and getting out of debt at a remarkable rate."

The same phenomenon is commented upon elsewhere by Howard Biddulph, recently elected president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. "When we consider," said he, "that about 13,000,000 people have almost $10,000,000,000 of deposits in mutual savings banks, with a further sum of $15,000,000,000 of savings in commercial savings banks, it is plain that American people have in their savings alone a great reservoir of liquid capital. I believe this frame of mind will provide the basis to begin anew. We should look to the soundness of recovery, rather than speed."—Detroit News.

But in all respect to the spirit of the great West Coast, it should be made clear that it was the first three fourths and that the West Coast mayor would have made all of them except that they put the clamps on him.

And Procy Hoover is sure he can win France over to his debt vacation plan. As if that were all, Herb, as if that were all. What about the U. S. Senate?

Just Folks

THE BANQUET SPEAKER'S LOT

The banquet speaker held 'em fast from introduction to the last. Big business men, severe and grim. Admirably looked up to him. And whispered: "Listen well we should; This orator is very good."

He told them what they ought to do And plainly made them like it, too. When thirty minutes' time had gone They rose and begged him to go on. Grave men, by oratory stirred, Called him the best they'd ever heard.

At last he closed in wild acclaim. To him great financiers came. And shook his hand and slapped his back, Then went upstairs their grips to pack. He'd made them laugh, he'd made them sob, But no one offered him a job.

Next day in every bank and store Business proceeded as before. Nothing was changed; the men he'd stirred Remembered him as one they'd heard, Which merely proved that busy men Enjoy a speaker now and then. (Copyright, 1931, Edgar A. Guest)

A Shaky Run Row!

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

THE RIGHT OF A CHILD TO LIVE

A teacher whose intellectual and professional attainments inspired my highest regard but whose moral principles did not, once suggested that the physician should forget a certain minor part of his routine service in certain instances, so that the child might not live. Later, as a young doctor, I tried the suggestion in practice, and while I "got away with it" all right, I never wanted to try it again.

Strange how one's ideas or views change from decade to decade. Years ago I was an earnest opponent of capital punishment. Now I believe in it thoroughly. Nothing particular has happened to change my view about it, so far as I know.

Suppose a child is bitten by a rattlesnake. Suppose the parents do not know what has happened, but finding the child obviously ill, they send for a doctor. The doctor immediately diagnoses the condition and having applied such emergency treatment as he can, hurries away to get some anti-venom. You see, the anti-venom is now available, and as it keeps well may be supplied by any druggist. The doctor finds the local druggist has but one package of the anti-venom on hand. He takes it, hurries back to the home of the stricken child, and injects the dose. But the child is evidently getting worse, and the one dose of anti-venom is insufficient. Desperately the doctor sends a call to a distant city for more anti-venom. The serum is shipped by airplane to the home of the child. The doctor is about to inject it when a sudden interruption comes. The child's father forbids any further doses of the anti-venom. The father gives as his reason an instance he says he observed many years ago—some one who received anti-venom for snake bites recovered, but always seemed rather feeble-minded. So the father prefers to let his child die rather than take any chance the child might survive and perhaps be feeble-minded.

What to do in such a quandary? Has the father the right to forbid giving the anti-venom? Substitute diphtheria for snake bite and antitoxin for anti-venom, and tell me, would the father have a right to forbid giving the child the second dose of antitoxin on the ground that he knows of some one who is feeble-minded and who once received one or more doses of antitoxin?

I had to watch a child die like that once. Oh, yes, I managed to have another doctor summoned, but unfortunately he was an inexperienced man and had never had any experience in treating diphtheria, so his evident uncertainty and ignorance only confirmed the father in his terrible attitude.

These amazingly unmoral people who sanction what they hypocritically call "birth control" when they mean prevention of conception, have a queer slant on shall we call it ethics. They remain silent about the fundamental injustices or wrongs which are the chief cause of poverty and disease, and then they brazenly assume the right to decide whether a child shall live.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Fair Exchange

I'll wager there are many nitwits in the medical as in the teaching profession in proportion, and this conviction enables a teacher to add the necessary grain of salt and enjoy your column. In other words I like your style but believe you are off the track just as much as the rest of us. Send me five copies of your rules for health living and I will see that every boy and girl in the physical education class in my school is exposed to them at least once.

(T. E. C.)

Answer—I must decline to affirm or deny on the ground that it would tend to get me in bad all around. The best rules for healthful living I can formulate are the articles in this column day by day. Anyway it can do your physical education pupils no harm to read 'em now and then.

Admission—To The Mind

Sixteen years ago a surgeon removed gall bladder which was enlarged and inflamed and appendix which was normal. Misery ever since ... adhesions ... have tried all sorts of diets ... no medicine because it does no good ...

Answer—The "adhesions," I deduce from your letter, are in the mind, not in the abdomen. You know too many pathological things which ain't so. If your misery should ever become severe enough to interfere with your work or play, consult a physician and try to comprehend that you know a little less than he does about medical matters.

Vanilla Or Sarsaparilla

We buy vanilla extract compound containing vanilla and cumarin. It is harmful to health to use this as a flavoring. Has sarsaparilla any medicinal value? (Mrs. M. O. J.)

Answer—That word "compound" usually means trickery—be it sanctioned by our noble government or not. In this instance it indicates the preparation is adulterated with tonka bean essence, which is a cheap and inferior substitute for vanilla. Sarsaparilla is a flavor without medicinal value.

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

It seemed that every wee Jap lad soon indicated he was glad to have the Tynies join right in the baseball game. "Well, say," cried Clowney, "I may be the worst, but will you boys let me bat first? I always like to run around the bases when I play."

The Travel Man snapped, "Won't you learn that you must always take your turn and play each angle of the game? Don't try to pick the best. The Japs may be real kind to you and let you bat first, but that won't do. Just get out in the field and do the same as all the rest."

So, for an hour or so they played. The little Jap lads off hurriedly the way the Tynies scampered round as speedy as could be. When Clowney got his turn to bat he swung real hard and then fell flat. "That pitcher is real clever. I can't see the ball," he said.

Of course the whole bunch tired out soon. The Travel Man then said, "It's noon and you should all be hungry. Come, let's go some place and eat. The little Japs can join us, too, and run back to their game when through." They shortly found an eating place and each one took a seat.

The friendly Japs, when lunch was over, thanked everyone and off they tore. The Tynies bid him a lot of bye and Scouty said, "They're great! But come, let's walk around a while. I'm good for 'bout a real short mile. There surely must be other things to see. Why hesitate?"

Not far away they found some boys who laughed and made a lot of noise. They marched in soldier fashion and were cute as they could be. Soon Clowney cried, "Well, look at that! Each one has on a paper hat. They'll some day be real soldiers. It's a really nice sight to see."

A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—On Ralston street, in the little town of Hyattsville, Maryland, just across the District of Columbia line, frequently one will see a man clad in overalls pattering around among the trees on his lawn.

He is Smith Wildman Brookhart, Iowa's Iowa's sharp tongued, hard hitting United States senator, including in a bit of recreation by doctoring his trees.

Tree surgery is to Brookhart what golf and fishing are to others. Long has it been his hobby to wander around on his lawn and search for defects in trees and act as their physician. And he has been at it so long that he has become an expert. The front and back yards of his home are studied with trees in a healthy condition saved by the senator.

There is one old maple tree which he has nursed with much the same care that would be given a child. He takes so much as he does his apple orchard back home in Washington, Iowa.

He devotes time to shade trees while in Washington only because they are the only ones available. His real field is the orchard, and he confesses that he misses nothing quite so much as he does his apple orchard back home in Washington, Iowa.

Sometimes he is tempted to buy an orchard near Washington that he might have a place where his talents could be used to a greater advantage.

When the senator is in Iowa, most of his spare time is spent on his small farm and apple orchard. There he has the reputation of being one of the most successful apple growers in the state.

Apples from his orchard have taken first place at the Iowa state fair, and once he was awarded the blue ribbon at the midwest fair in Kansas City.

He planted the orchard himself, and it has been bearing fruit for only a few years.

Eye For Wrong Methods

Trees and everything connected with them appeal to Senator Brookhart tremendously. His friends say that as he rides through the country he observes all the orchards along the road. He is quick to detect wrong methods and points them out to his companions.

He cares nothing for golf and the more conventional ways of getting recreation. But when the senate adjourns early enough in the afternoon or when his duties otherwise permit he hurries home to get in at least one hour with his trees before night fall.

Graveling trees in his interest is rifle marksmanship. In this field, too, he is an expert. He has taught marksmanship, has captained world championship teams and has served four terms as president of the National Rifle Association of America.

RUSSIAN REVOLT PLOT

On June 24, 1917, a plot to bring about an armed revolt, when the all-Russian congress of Soviets would be in session, was revealed. The Bolsheviks, who planned the revolt, had hoped to arrest the members of the provisional government and assume full power. They also planned to recall all the soldiers serving at the front.

This action came after the Bolsheviks had held mass meetings among the troops, preaching defeatism and surrender and urging the soldiers not to obey the orders of "bourgeois officers." The provisional government, aware of the peril of this propaganda, did not attempt to end it by force.

The following month the Bolsheviks staged a two-day revolt, which was put down by Cossack troops. At this time Alexander Kerensky, endeavored to bring order out of chaos.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York—Reflections in a theater lobby at a gala first night:

Well, I see the who's who of Broadway turned out for this show. ... They heard that Philadelphia liked it quite a lot.

So here's Laurette Taylor. Haven't seen her in moons. Will be remembered for only one performance. ... "Peg o' My Heart." Yet she was instrumental in bringing the voluptuous Lynn Fontanne to these shores from England.

Now Miss Fontanne is one of Broadway's "first actresses." But neither she nor Alfred Lunt, her husband, are among the first nighters. Believe they shouldn't mix with their public.

But Peggy Wood is here, with her husband, John V. A. Weaver, the poet. She's back from London, where she was a big hit in "Bitter Sweet" as the English Evelyn Laye was in the same show on this side. How international the world is becoming.

Local Notables

There's Tallulah Bankhead. It seems the typewriter keys automatically get together and spell her name these days. She's going around with an idol of the Hollywood studios, but they say it isn't serious.

Mayor Walker again is first-nighting. Also Conde Nast. Wonder if his family tree doesn't include Thomas Nast, the cartoonist who first symbolized Tammany with the now famous Tiger.

Here's a lady probably unknown outside of New York—Kitty Watts. Yet she is one of the most familiar figures at movies and theater openings and parties, to which she accompanies her critical son, Richard.

Plenty of others also are local celebrities. Wonder how many out-of-towners could identify Howard Dietz, Tammany Young, Arthur Hopkins or even Winfield Sheehan.

Among the decorative contingent are Peggy Sears and Phyllis Haver. One of the "Follies," the other of the movies, they now are married in the beauty-and-wealth tradition, yet, still a treat for eyes on the audience side.

Manhattanotes

Wonder if the Belasco theater, which the late producer named for his monument, will retain that name.

Another producer's name is on his theater in removable letters, because it is owned by somebody else and you never know what might happen. That's Broadway. Heather Thatcher, visiting English actress friend of the P. G. W. H. houses, is here with her monologue.

The "ex" books have been supplanted by the "virgin" novels. A "Broadway Virgin," "The Impudent Virgin" and "The Professional Virgin."

But what I waited all this time to tell is that synthetic sea air is pumped into a new restaurant near Broadway to give "a marine tang."

So that's why we have science! It isn't until after a man is married that he begins to doubt the expression that it is the woman who pays and pays and pays.

Depression Has Broken
Capone; Booze-Czar Now
Faces U. S. Prison Term

Editor's Note: This is the first of our exclusive stories by Robert E. Wright for NEA Service, Inc., and Post-Crescent, on the trial of Al Capone, who at last is a sentence in Leavenworth penitentiary, as obtained from federal officials at Chicago. The following stories will tell how the booze-czar was broken, how he obtained and of the men who led for years to get it.)

BY ROBERT E. WRIGHT
Wright, 1931, NEA Service, Inc., Chicago — Al Capone, for whom the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., is to open its doors, is a broken man. The evil genius of organized crime who welded Chicago's vice, bling and bootlegging into a mass of gigantic proportions, annual receipts running into millions, has seen his vast syndicate crash on the rock that has killed so many legitimate enterprises—depression.

Today his big underworld organization is a financial derelict and

J. S. Figures Show How Capone's
Income Has Declined

Here is Al Capone's income for six calendar years and the amount of the tax he dodged in each of these years, figures having been obtained officially from federal records at Chicago:

	Gross income	Evaded tax
1924	$123,102.89	$32,459.24
1925	257,286.98	55,365.25
1926	195,677.00	39,962.75
1927	218,057.04	45,557.76
1928	140,892.93	25,857.73
1929	104,000.00	15,517.76
	$1,038,659.84	$215,080.48

It is not contended that even these figures are complete. They represent only the amount of income that the government says it is able to prove. Officials admit there may have been much more on which they were unable to get the evidence. Penalties and interest charges increase the tax the government is now trying to collect to $400,000.

one, himself, is insolvent and in debt. In these statements of the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau's "Intelligence" (the secret service of the Internal Revenue Bureau) who worked for more than three years setting the evidence for the income tax evasion of Al Capone, it is deeply did they dig into his affairs and so remarkably did they find that Capone chose to plead guilty rather than fight.

"Insolvent"
Al Capone is insolvent and heavily in debt to his friends, says A. Madden, special agent in charge of the Chicago office of the internal revenue unit, who has been in charge of the long investigation into gangster's financial affairs. "If he is to liquidate today, his liabilities exceed his assets by 10 to 1," says L. Irey, Washington chief of the Internal Revenue Bureau's investigation, who has given a large part of his personal attention to the Capone case and made many visits to Chicago, debunks some of the stories about Capone's vast wealth.

Capone is not the financial power that the public thinks he is, says Irey. "He might have had an income of $10,000 a week for short periods but that was squandered in advance, by overdrawing his percentage in enterprises in which he is reported to be interested. There is no foundation in fact for the widely circulated stories of his income running into millions, neither Capone nor any one of his representatives has offered the government $4,000,000 in settlement for his tax or criminal cases against him."

Pawns Wife's Jewels
Among other facts turned up by government's investigators during their long inquiry into his affairs were: Capone, hard pressed for cash, pawned some of his wife's jewels to get payments on his home in Ida.

He borrowed $25,000 from a money lender on Chicago's West Side. He has not kept up his payments on two 16-cylinder Cadillac automobiles that he bought early this year. He is heavily in debt to certain individuals who have extended him huge loans.

Of course, this does not mean that one is in want—or anything like that—generally, at least, in the command and demand. And a loan for a loan backed by the real knowledge that it might not be repaid, can be expected to result. Probably it has already.

are reasons for Capone's financial fall. But not to be understood. Much of the credit is due to the work of the Internal Revenue Bureau's agents who wrecked vast financial organization with a series of relentless income tax prosecutions against his chief lieutenants. Two of these—Frank Nitti, Capone's treasurer, and Sam Lick, who directed the big gambling syndicates—are already in the penitentiary. Several others—including Al's brother, Ralph Capone, who led the beer activities—have been convicted and sentenced but now are at liberty on appeal.

Liquor Market Hit
The business factors entering into the liquor market are clear, too. The market for beer and liquor is off, as it is in other industries—depression is the answer. At night clubs and other gay places crowds are thinner and even those that remain there are not so many guests who are not (or able to) pay $12 or $16 a drink for Capone's best liquor. The other end of the line, the popular corner saloons (operating legitimate soft drink parlors) and where one can buy a glass of Capone's beer for 25 cents, have felt the slump caused by joblessness.

Capone's dog track where fleet hounds once raced amid heavy bets (and which actually paid a percentage profit in one year, as was in the prosecution of one of Capone's cases) has been closed. Capone's gambling houses are

STATE TAKES LEAD
REGULATING TRUSTS

Governor Signs Bill Attempting to Define Standards

Madison —(P)—Wisconsin took the lead in the regulation of investment trust shares when Gov. Philip LaFollette yesterday signed a bill attempting to define standards under which such securities are sold to the public.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Irving Michigan, Milwaukee. Heretofore investment trust shares could be sold without a license. Under the new law such shares or certificates must qualify for a permit to be issued by the securities division of the Public Service commission.

The governor also signed a bill exempting from taxation property owned by women's organizations which is used for social or educational purposes and not for pecuniary profits.

Other measures approved: A bill giving the county board the right to establish the width of a highway on the approval of the governing board of the municipality where a highway is to be widened. A bill prohibiting the moving of pile drivers, steam shovels and similar railroad machinery outside yard limits except with a full crew.

A bill permitting towns to contract with town or villages in adjoining counties to pay the cost of fire protection and giving them the right to contract with private corporations and individuals.

ASKS BANKERS TO FIGHT
COMPETITION BY U. S.

Waterloo, Iowa —(P)—Fred H. Clutton, Chicago Board of Trade secretary, suggested today that Iowa bankers might take the initiative toward removal of government competition with private enterprise. In an address for delivery at the Iowa bankers state convention, he said bankers who give close study to world factors must recognize the probability of an increase of taxes in this country because of losses incurred by the states in their interference with markets and with the free flow of grain and cotton into consumer channels.

"I am reminded," he said, "that in 1923 the forward looking bankers of Iowa led a campaign to take the government out of the savings bankers' business when they insisted that the war savings certificates program must stop. Iowa bankers were the leaders then; perhaps they now will again be the leaders to get the government out of business in competition with her own citizens and taxpayers."

GREEN BAY BUYS SITE FOR DISPOSAL PLANT

Green Bay —(P)—Acquisition by the city of 213 acres of land at the mouth of Fox River, including approximately 4,000 feet of bay and river frontage in the heart of the badly house, and joined up with the first Chicago gangs when the liquor racket began. Amid a series of shocking murders that marked successive steps, he rose to wealth and power. A genius for organization, though an evil genius, he syndicated and marketed vice on an elaborate scale where his predecessors had merely peddled it. He made it pay, but it develops now—he squandered his own part as fast as he made it and sometimes faster.

The men who wrecked this vast organization by digging up the evidence that brought Capone's chief lieutenants into court for violation of the income tax law and finally got the "big fellow" himself were not roolins', toothin' two-gun officers of the old school or detectives who resorted to disguises and the like.

Instead, they were quiet, persistent accountants employed by the U. S. Bureau of Internal Revenue's secret service who checked bale after bale of old bank records, analyzed hundreds of thousands of separate transactions, spent three and a half years digging into highly complicated accounts, traced checks for huge amounts from one dirty hand to another—and finally got their man.

Their story is a vivid chapter in itself, but first must be told the story of the Capone gang's prosecutor, U. S. District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson of Chicago, who has been least an important case in his five years in office. This story will be told tomorrow.

an uninterrupted fashion

Its uninterrupted line of beauty, smooth, succinct, is the reason for the opera's unbroken record of popularity. One long slim line from heel to toe, a line flattering to the foot and complementary to the morning, afternoon or evening silhouette. Walk-Over operas are famous for their heel-clinging fit and the way in which they hug the arch and instep.

FIND SCHOOL COSTS
FAVOR URBAN PUPIL

Madison —(P)—The discrepancy between the costs of education in the various school districts of the state "is more than two to one in favor of the urban youth," Assistant State Superintendent O. H. Plenzke said in a study made recently.

"Four-fifths of the area of Wisconsin lies outside of high school districts," Mr. Plenzke said. "Pupils from this area attending high school have the tuition paid by their townships. During the year 1929-30, 25,921 non-residents were enrolled at a cost of $2,268,773.12. Such costs are direct tax charges upon the town or village valuations.

"Some counties with large populations have small tuition enrollments. High schools in these counties are few and relatively inaccessible. Certain large areas of our state have a heavy population but no high school is within reach. There are two ways in which this lack of high school opportunity may be corrected. The first and most obvious method is the establishment of union high schools with adequate state aid. The other way is provision for state aid for transportation of high school pupils. The big problem is getting rural children to high school is distance from home. In 1929-30, 6.5 per cent of the children under the jurisdiction of county superintendents attended high school, whereas 16.3 per cent of the city children enjoyed the advantages of secondary schools."

Many Actors Get Their Names In Peculiar Ways

Hollywood —(CFA)—No wonder some people get into the movies. Look how they got their names—not the screen names, but the real ones. Roland Young, the English actor, was named for a canary. No fooling. Ken Maynard was named for a patient medicine ad. Bela Lugosi has the name of a town in Hungary. Frances Starr was named by mistake. And Lew Cody was named by mispronunciation.

At about the time Roland Young was born, his grandmother's pet canary died. She called the bird "Roland," and it was a peach of a canary, too, so she wouldn't give the family any rest till they agreed to call the baby by the same name. She liked the name, anyway, or she wouldn't have bestowed it on the canary in the first place.

When Ken Maynard was born, his father happened to see a patent medicine advertisement which carried a picture of a little boy named Kenneth O'Lynn. Maynard says he doesn't know whether it was because the medicine or the picture was so good, or because his father just liked the name. Anyway, they called the baby Kenneth O'Lynn Maynard.

Subsequently the father of Kenneth O'Lynn Maynard wrote to the father of Kenneth O'Lynn, and though the two fathers never met, they corresponded for years.

One of Bela Lugosi's ancestors founded the town of Lugosi in Hungary, some 125 years ago. Gradually the town became Lugos, as it is today, but the family retain the original name. It isn't that Bela Lugosi was named for the town. The town was named for great-great-grandpa.

And Frances Starr's parents had three daughters already. So her mother decided that this baby was going to be a boy and his name would be Frances. But nevertheless the baby turned out to be a girl, and they named her Frances, anyhow.

But Lew Cody's parents hadn't any intention of calling him Lew or Cody. They started him out in life as Louis Joseph Cote, with an accent mark over the final "e"; for, though living in Maine, Young Louis Joseph's father was French. Well, Cote with an accent is pronounced Codi but at the time Louis—who by then was Lew—had started his stage career, Buffalo Bill Cody was at the height of his fame. Nine times out of ten, people called Lew Cote "Lew Cody" and eight times out of ten, they addressed letters to him as "Cody" instead of Cote. Till at last Cote gave up and said, "All right! All right! Lew Cody to you." And it is.

Our advertising

DAY AFTER DAY, as you turn the pages of this paper, you see the advertising of things you need. Food, clothing, home equipment . . . all the necessities and luxuries that go to make up the fullness of modern living.

Has it ever occurred to you to wonder just how far you could trust these advertisements as reliable guides to the selection of worthy products?

We can answer your question in one broad statement. ANY PRODUCT OR SERVICE THAT YOU SEE CONSISTENTLY ADVERTISED IN THE PAGES OF THIS PUBLICATION IS WORTHY IN QUALITY, HONESTLY PRICED AND TRUTHFULLY PRESENTED.

Why? For the very simple reason that to the maker and the seller of an unworthy product, advertising presents the quickest and surest road to failure. To the misrepresented product, advertising brings a sudden and fatal storm of public disapproval. To the dishonest maker, advertising brings a constant public reminder of his dishonesty.

Truth in advertising has come to stay . . . its use is no longer dependent on the INTEGRITY of the advertiser, but on his BUSINESS ABILITY. NOTHING ELSE PAYS.

And, in addition, the publishers of your paper make every effort to disbar from these columns any advertising that might prove objectionable or unprofitable in any way to its readers.

Read the advertisements here. They offer you a dependable short cut to the kind of merchandise you would select if you spent your day in shopping for it.

The second week in August has been set aside for business girls this year, and a group of Columbus Community club girls has made arrangements for an outing at that time. At the close of the girls' camping season the last week in August, the camp will be open to any women of the diocese who desire a week's rest or outing.

No Magic In Pointing To Child Aims

BY ANGELO PATRI

I am forced to believe that there is no magic in the matter of training children. I wish there were. I would like to rub a lamp, or pronounce some magic rhyme and make instant changes in children who seem to need a more perfect method or manner at the instant. Nor can I believe that the shape of their heads, the form of their hands, the sort of nose, pug or aquiline, means much. Noses change, fingers take on intelligence or they don't, bones set in accordance with some law about which I know nothing. Children continue to be a mystery and a beckoning gesture as far as I am concerned.

"I want you to put Jack in the art class, please."

"Why so? He is getting along very well in the printing room."

"But I don't want him in the printing room. Didn't you ever notice his long slim fingers? He has the fingers of an artist. If you would only give him a chance to prove himself I know he would be an artist."

This when Jack didn't know how to draw an apple, or a box, in spite of all the lessons he had been exposed to in the six years of elementary school. "But school does not intend to make a printer of Jack. Just now he enjoys the work in that shop. What he will do by and by we do not know. It may be that he will develop a taste and a talent for drawing, or some form of art. Then we will try to direct him to the place he can get the most out of his gift. Just now he does not feel, he does not see, art."

"But his fingers? His fingers are the fingers of an artist."

"Maybe. Maybe they are the fingers of an artist, of a surgeon, of a printer or a plumber. Only time will tell us. We have to wait."

Sometimes artists have long fingers, sometimes they have not. One of the rising sculptors is a five by three sort of person with pudgy hands out of whose fingers tips flow form that make one pray or praise. He looks like a block of living granite. His energy is terrific and he has a pug nose.

Red hair is not always the sign of brilliance, nor of bad temper. Sometimes a red haired child is brilliant, sometimes he has bad temper, but there is no rule, nor law about it. Sometimes a child with a pug nose and freckles has artistic gifts while the one with the long slender hands has none. Sometimes it is the other way around. You cannot tell from the outside of a child what is in the inside. Nor can you tell what he is to be at thirty years of age by what he is at thirteen.

It is true we sometimes get hints of a child's possibilities but these hints come by way of his deeds and not by his outer wrapper. You can judge quite accurately by what a child does of what he is thinking and wishing. Even when we make mistakes. The lovely thing about childhood is that there is always a future, always a promise. Regardless of externals we can keep hoping. We can help children by refraining from putting labels on them, especially when these labels are our own tags and not truly related to the children as they are.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 by NEA Service, Inc.

WHEN Sue took her place in the general stenographic room at the Decker manufacturing plant the next morning she felt self-conscious. She knew that all of the girls were whispering about her. She could hear them. They were saying that she was engaged to Jack Thornton. That it was strange she should be working here.

Some of the girls openly wondered why Sue was permitted to work in such a humble capacity in her brother-in-law's plant. One of them raised her voice purposely so Sue would have to hear her. "I'm working here merely because I want to. I need the money," Sue told her in a clear, vibrant voice that carried all around the room. "Harry doesn't know I have the position. And if I don't amke good I'll be fired. But you all know that there isn't extra money floating around our house. The newspapers played up the Cinderella end of the story pretty well."

"When are you being married?" somebody asked. Sue smiled and the dimples flashed in her cheeks. "Soon. Why?"

"I just wondered. My sister needs work and she had hoped she could get this job. But it's all right. You're leaving soon, you say?"

The day went on. It reminded Sue of the first few days that she had worked in the Thornton office. She realized that she was tired. The work was much more strenuous than the tasks in the law office had been. She didn't have the excitement now of Jack's comings and goings.

Along about four o'clock Harry came in. His face looked stern but his eyes were laughing. "By all the fish in the seven seas, what in the world made you come here for a job?" he asked her. Sue could feel the slowing rhythm of the typewriter keys in the office. The girls weren't going to miss out on the scene.

"Because I needed a job and you had one. Nobody else did," Sue answered, laughing while the blue deepened in her eyes. "But I can't say that I'm especially keen about it. I don't like being a machine. And I don't like writing steel orders. It's such unromantic stuff."

"Come on up to my office. I want to see you, anyway," Harry said. "Who told you I was working here?" Sue asked when they were out of earshot.

"Everybody," he smiled again. "But I admire your pluck, Sue. You are independent. That's why I liked you . . . long ago."

"And Corinne is even more independent. Much more. That's why you like her much better," Sue finished for Harry.

"You will! But I do like you, you know. Sort of well," he went on. "Well, if you have to have a job well make one for you. Let's see . . . how would you like personal work? Showing the girls how to dress and telling them how to act when they go to restaurants and . . ."

They were in a Harry's office by that time, and Sue sank down in a big upholstered chair. "Oh, it feels good to sit still," she said. "My back honestly aches. But it's just because it's the first day."

"We'll make the personnel job fit into our schedule. You can't go on typing," Harry said. "Oh, no, you won't," Sue sat up straight. "I don't want to ac-

YOUR DENTIST WILL ADVISE YOU ABOUT GUMS

BY ALICIA HART

Pyorrhea is a term that is well-known to all of us. But only those who have had it can know its seriousness.

If you are afflicted with pyorrhea, go to a dentist immediately. If your gums are not bleeding, but are of an unhealthy color, prevent any such trouble by proper care yourself.

The Life Extension Institute advises the use of three drops of wine of ipecac dropped on the toothbrush daily, with the teeth scrubbed thoroughly with it. The technical name of this is tincture of wine of ipecacuanha.

Treatment At Home
A non-toxic iodine, which is especially prepared for use on the gums, can be obtained and applied by yourself, but you must do it only in the following manner.

Make pads of absorbent cotton to cover the gums at the roots of the teeth to absorb the saliva. Then cover an orange-wood stick with cotton and dip it into this specially prepared iodine and swab your gums all around the outside. Put new cotton pads inside the mouth and swab with fresh iodine on the inside. Treat both the upper and lower jaw in this manner.

If you have gum trouble, go have your teeth cleaned immediately. Your dentist will tell you all. Take his advice and put in as much time daily on your teeth as he suggests. For there is no more bothersome feeling in the mouth than the fear that your breath is unpleasant. And it is bound to be if your gums are affected.

Gargles Are Effective.
Gargles are a good daily habit. In the first place, they clean out your throat. Second, if you use a disinfectant, they are tremendously helpful in keeping the gums healthy and pink.

In the above deal, West holds an extremely strong six card Spade suit and there is naturally a great temptation to bid it over South's opening bid of one Club. However, his holding is not such as to justify a forcing overcall for the bid is not playable. An overcall with but one Spade would by no means picture the strength actually held.

Accordingly, his best procedure is to make an informative double with the full intention of bidding more than the second round even though it may require a bid of more than one to do so. It is true that in this case East would name his Diamonds even should West bid the Spades, but it is unlikely that either East or West would care to mention the Heart suit at a bid of two or more if the informative double by West had not been made.

It will be noted that North raises the Club bid to two over the informative double. This bid makes East's procedure different from what it should be had this two Club bid not occurred. In the absence of the two Club bid by North, East should bid one Heart rather than mention the stronger suit and longer Diamond suit. The inference is that West is better prepared for the former. However, the two Club bid has relieved East of any duty to respond to the double and the bid made should be his own and therefore two Diamonds. When West on the second round mentions the Spades, of which East holds the singleton, it is time for East to read West's informative double for what it was and bid the Hearts.

Salient Points of Bidding
Contract: South opens the bidding with one Club, West doubles informatively. North bids two Clubs and East two Diamonds. South passes and West bids two Spades. North passes, East bids three Hearts, South passes and West bids four Hearts, concluding the bidding.

Auction: South opens the bidding with one Club, West doubles informatively. North bids two Clubs, East two Diamonds, South passes, West bids two Spades, North passes and East bids three Hearts, concluding the bidding.

The Play
South opens the King of Clubs and continues with the Ace in hopes of killing Dummy's re-entry for the Spades. Diamonds having been voluntarily bid by East, a shift to that suit does not seem desirable. It is true that the lead of the singleton Spade would enable South to get in one trump if he should hold two Spades, but three tricks will not save the game. Dummy trumps the second Club trick and the Spade suit is started. North taking the first trick with the Ace and leading his Queen of Clubs to force Dummy to trump again. Since the Ace and King of Hearts are the only entry cards in Dummy, West goes ahead with the Spades, allowing South to trump.

It will do no good for South to lead another Club, for East could trump it himself. No matter what the continuation may be, Declarer will lead two rounds of trumps and be able to discard two more Diamonds on West's good Spades.

WE WOMEN

OVER-CRITICAL SWEET-HEART-FOLLY OF BROODING OVER WRONG HERO

P. F. G. Sounds very much as if the boy had heard a great deal from his parents on the subject of You. And it's barely possible that your earlier criticisms of him, may have affected his and their opinion of you.

You see, you probably made the mistake so many girls are apt to make. You started right out picking flaws in your man, without considering for a moment that other's might be having a whack at you when you weren't looking. You said to yourself that he displeased you in this way and that without pausing to reflect that he might have taken one or two little notes, himself, on what was wrong with you.

And I suppose your attitude showed, although extra tactful and careful. It was bound to. You couldn't expect his parents to overlook that attitude. He probably heard several sharp lectures about your short-comings, and wondered, himself whether you were all that he wanted in the way of a wife.

If you can understand his attitude, you will see why your indiscreet little scraps led to such big results. And you will see that a good part of the blame lies on your slender shoulders.

You were a little too sure of your own little too sure of your own worthiness to win you.

Perhaps if you changed that attitude, showed some humility for a change, and a little appreciation of his best qualities, he would change also and his family's opinion would cease to have so much weight with him.

For he is convinced in his heart of hearts that you're the sympathetic loving companion he needs nothing in the world will take him away from you.

Seek Other Companionship
A SINCERE READER. If I were you, I'd certainly go out with the good friend who seems to be so fond of you and let the more indifferent suitor take care of himself. You're not going to be any more attractive to your hero remaining home moaning about him and his refusal to notice you.

Let him do a little worrying. If there's worrying to be done stop out for a change, and give him a chance to see you in that most becoming of all settings, a circle of admiring Other Men.

That may be just the view of you he's never had, and the effect may be all that you could wish for.

Your father and mother are most wise to suggest your paying a little attention to someone else. It's all nonsense to give up the world and its pleasure for the sake of a seventeen-year old romance which isn't even a sentimental episode yet. Have a good time while you can, and let the Romeo in the piece begin to notice you of his own accord.

POSTAL SOFTBALL TEAM WINS AGAIN

City Officials Victims Second Time This Season—Score Is 9-3

Menasha—Softball players of the city officials who last week were obliged to turn over the offices to the postoffice softball team when they lost a ball game, 9 to 3, last night also were forced to relinquish their hold on the city.

The city seers lost the ball when they came out on the short end of a 11 to 4 defeat at the hands of the postal aggregation.

The seers were held scoreless until the sixth inning, when they managed to bring in a run, making the score 9 to 1. In the seventh inning, after the postal crew had brought the score to 11 to 1, the seers bunched their hits and countered more points.

Lawrence Ponto pitched errorless ball for the postal aggregation, while Harold Berro stood on the mound for the city crew. Hillard Walburn caught for the postoffice team, and Melvin Crowley, city attorney, stood behind the bat for the city aggregation.

The game was delayed for 15 minutes in the fifth inning while Mr. Crowley and members of the postal team argued several technicalities of the game. The umpire ruled the city attorney "out of order" and the game was resumed.

Next week the strong postal team will engage a team from the city team from the city pumping station and fifteen dollars in prize money to gain possession of the plant and city water supply. The postoffice building has been staged against the plant in the wager, according to postal officials.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED IN STOMMEL CASES

Neenah—Circuit Judge Beglinger on Tuesday ordered a new trial in the cases of John Stommel of Menasha versus James Antonson of Manitowish and Walter Stommel versus the same defendant. The actions were tried as one before a jury at the last court term. Rendering an opinion on motions after verdict, the judge held that justice had not been done in the jury verdict, which favored the Stommels.

Walter Stommel was driving a car as his father's agent, and Antonson was driver of the other machine, the jury found. The cars were involved June 13 last in a collision near Riverside park.

Special verdict answers found negligence on the part of Antonson but none on the part of Stommel. The father's damages were found to total $612.75 and those of the son, $2,065. Damages to Antonson's car was found to amount to $150. Walter Stommel was injured in the crash.

Many of last year's championship teams are out again this year. The regular team will not be selected until after July 1, according to Manager Muench. A group of fans is planning to witness the Friday game at Kimbrey.

Opening Dance, Stephensville Pavilion, Fri., June 26.

BOARD APPROVES PROPOSED PAVING

Report on E. Forest-ave Project Is Ready for City Council

Neenah—A petition requesting paving of E. Forest-ave from N. Commercial-st. to Lake Winnebago presented at the last council meeting and referred to the board of public works, has been approved by the board. A report will be submitted to the council at its July meeting. Should the council decide to pave the street, work will be started as soon as bids can be received. Plans for the pavement call for a road four feet wider than at present.

The board did not act on the petition to pave or resurface E. Wisconsin-ave from the Chicago and Northwestern railway tracks to Park-ave. The petition recently presented to the council was signed by about 25 property owners along the street. The city owns more than one-half of the property on the north side of the street, along Shattuck park, the public library and the entire length of Riverside park.

PHIL GETS BILL TO REINSTATE RAY J. CANNON

Senate Passes Measure Favoring Milwaukee Lawyer by 17 to 13 Vote

Madison—(P)—A bill to reinstate Raymond J. Cannon, disbarred Milwaukee attorney and recent candidate for the state supreme court, today was before Governor La Follette for veto or approval after concurrence by the senate, voting 17 to 13. Cannon was suspended after investigation of charges of ambulance chasing and malpractice two years ago. The supreme court, answering his petition for reinstatement, passed the matter to the state board of bar commissioners to determine if Cannon had made unwarranted charges against the state judiciary. The supreme court then adjourned for summer vacation.

The bill introduced by Assemblyman John Grobbschmidt, Milwaukee, for Cannon's reinstatement was upheld in the senate by Senator John E. Cashman, Denmark, who held the floor an hour in defense of the attorney's record and the right of the legislature to set aside the court's verdict.

"The only trouble with Cannon," he said, "is that he is a poor man's lawyer. The legislature has all the power. Not prohibited by the state and federal constitutions while the courts have those powers delegated expressly by the constitution."

He pointed out a decision given in the 80's by the state supreme court turned down Cannon's plea and passed it to the bar commission as an attempted inquisition concerning Cannon's remarks made during his judicial campaign.

Senator Walter Goodland, Racine, contended passage of the measure would place the senate on record as opposed to Cannon's plea and against the legal profession and Senator O. S. Loomis, Mauston, said every lawyer, when admitted to the bar, knew there were certain rules and regulations to which he must submit and "I don't feel the legislature has the right to interfere until certain statutes are repealed."

If the legislature can reinstate lawyers, Senator Glenn Roberts, Madison, said, it also could reinstate doctors, dentists or anyone licensed by the state.

"Put Raymond J. Cannon out of the picture, and vision the effect of your decision in the years to come," he said.

VANDERBILT COURT BATTLE FORECAST

Wife Denies Cornelius' Charges and Files Own Action for Divorce

Reno, Nev.—(P)—The Cornelius Vanderbilts, Jr., were squared away today for what may develop into a battle to the finish in the Reno divorce courts.

Following their separation and the filing of a divorce complaint by Mr. Vanderbilt last week, his wife filed her answer late yesterday denying his allegations of cruelty and asking that she and not her husband be granted a decree on those grounds. Mr. Vanderbilt has 10 days in which to reply.

Samuel Platt, his attorney, has not announced whether the young writer will consent to presentation of the decrees to his wife or make a contest of it.

When Vanderbilt brought suit against his first wife in 1927 the question of who was to get the divorce was decided out of court and Rachel Littleton Vanderbilt won the decree without a fight.

Mrs. Vanderbilt estimated her husband's monthly income at more than $2,000 in the answer and cross-bill and asked for the arrangement of temporary and permanent alimony. The complaint's allegations of cruelty were not specific. Vanderbilt refused to comment.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was not in the city when the action was filed, having left for Lake Tahoe for an overnight stay shortly after a noon conference with her attorney, William Woodburn.

Neither of the Vanderbilts mentioned in their suits the man over whom they were supposed to have quarreled—Peter Arno, popular caricaturist whom Mr. Vanderbilt accused of having paid undue attention to his wife.

SOVIETS WOULD DESTROY WORLD, SAYS ENGINEER

Five-year Plan Is Explained by James Watt at Rotary Meeting

destruction. At the end of that period the intelligentsia of Russia, lawyers, industrial leaders will have been eliminated and every trace of the former regime will be destroyed. The induction of American, English and French engineers at the present time is in truth an insidious system of replacing Russia's own engineers, he stated.

Mr. Watt took issue with the statements of Colonel Hugh L. Cooper, who after seven years in Russia has sent out a great commendation of Russia's plan. He refuted the statements of Col. Cooper that more people go to church in Russia than in the United States, that divorce is rare, that 99 per cent of the people are back of the government and that there is no forced labor in Russia, calling them absolute untruths.

"Actually the avowed purpose of the Soviet government is the destruction of God, and they are developing a hatred of God," he said.

Youngsters are taught to write "there is no God, there is no God." They are taught to respect for home and parents and fastidious life. Why, I saw kids on the streets of Kharkov playing shinny with a human skull. It is more serious to break a tractor wheel than to destroy a human life in Russia.

"Marriage Is Travesty"

"As for divorce, marriage is just a travesty in Russia. A young couple, after signing their names, pay a ruble and a half and are married. Fifteen minutes later they are come back, pay another ruble and a half, and be divorced. This can be done five or six times a day.

"It is untrue that 99 per cent of the populace is behind the government. Practically every workman I talked with thoroughly despises and loathes the government. If I would say there is but one per cent of the people behind the Soviet.

"Russia is virtually in a state of absolute slavery and contrary to Col. Cooper's views, all labor is forced labor."

Termining the present situation," a man's exploitation of human life, the attempt of a handful of maniacs to mechanize everything," Mr. Watt explained that it is no longer Communism, that the communists who brought on the revolution after the abdication of the Czar are themselves being destroyed by the radicals who have taken charge of things.

Can Save Country

"It's not too late to save Russia, and, probably, the world. If public opinion is aroused so that America, for example, the plan of destruction can be halted without bloodshed or much expenditure of money. If America, England and Germany would withdraw their engineers, it would end the movement within six months."

Mr. Watt told of his quiet departure from Russia, planned so he could get out of the country before officials had time to consider the matter carefully. He waited until a week before he was to leave before he placed his resignation with his firm, and left Kharkov without interference. Fortunately he was able to leave Moscow the same day he arrived, after having expected to be detained there for three days. He went to Peking, where he discovered that China was much alarmed over the Red army in that country and then went on to Tokio, where he found Soviet propaganda being promoted through moving pictures. Questioned about permitting the showing of the pictures, Japanese officials said that they were unable to curtail the showings, that they were much worried about the Red propaganda in Japan.

The new building, measuring approximately 40 by 45 feet, is being placed on three-acre tract set off in the Edward Freitag woodland on a new town road recently opened connecting the village with the relocated Highway 57.

Buildings of Vernon Kundiger, including a cheese factory on one side of the road and a residence and apartments on the other, are not being removed for the construction of the highway. Though the relocation involves the passage of the road and its adjoining between the buildings, the point is said to be a division line admitting drainage from there in opposite directions. The way tank at the factory will have to be removed, Mr. Kundiger says.

The building was erected by H. Siter in the early 60's and was used as a grocery store and a saloon. In about 1887 the building was purchased by H. Ankiam, Sr., who was proprietor of the saloon. Later it was taken over by Albert E. Ankiam, a son. In about 1915 the building was sold to Mr. Solverson, Waupaca, and then to Oscar Lightfoot, who moved it into the Public Service garage.

Washington Reduces Philadelphia's Lead in A. L. To 2½ Games

CRONIN STARS FOR SENATORS; MACKS WIN, LOSE

Bob Grove Hurls 13th Victory in First Game With St. Louis

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer
TWO of the season's outstanding stars in the American league this year are a couple of young players who hardly have been in the front long enough to know their way around it. Joe Cronin, husky young Washington shortstop, came up to the Senators in the middle of the 1928 season and did not really begin to shine until last year, while Ben Chapman of the New York Yankees was a newcomer in 1930.

As things stand now, Cronin leads the league in batting in runs, in the total number of hits made and in slugging averages. He is well up in his batting averages, is fielding first and since he is not yet 25 years old, he is still rated as a "corner" rather than as an established star. Chapman, only a fair infielder who batted a little better than .300 last year, also is hitting along with the best and has made a specialty of stealing bases. With no place in the infield for him he has been put in left field to keep him in the lineup.

Steals Three Bases
The Yankees youngster stole three bases in the second game yesterday as his chief contribution to New York's double victory over the Chicago White Sox. He brought his total for the season to 26 only one less than Charley Gehringer's total which led the league in 1930. Chapman also made three hits and batted in four runs as the Yankees won by scores of 8 to 6 and 9 to 4. Babe Ruth's fourteenth homer and a six hit pitching performance by Ed Wells in the second clash were merely added attractions.

Cronin helped the Senators take a pair of games from Detroit by hitting three home runs in the first game and figuring in four double plays. Piling up 13 hits, Washington had an easy time winning the first game 10 to 8, but they played nine scoreless innings in the closing duel between Fred Marberry and George Hobe before batting around in the eighth to score four runs and win 4-1.

Out Mack Lead
The twin victory enabled the Senators to reduce Philadelphia's lead to 4 games as the Athletics got only one even break with the St. Louis Browns. Bob Grove pitched the champions to a 3 to 0 victory in the first game, shutting out the Browns with two singles to win his thirteenth game of the season, but the Browns, badly outclassed, lasted to win the 12th inning second game 5 to 4.

Cleveland stole some of the thunder from the American league leaders, who have been specializing in slugging, by sending out two nuns who pitched shutout against Boston. Clint Brown held the Red Sox to five hits to win the first game 13 to 0, then Willis Fudlin improved on that performance by granting only one hit as he Indians took the second 10 to 0. Only one double header was left when the weekend was through with the National league program and in the Cincinnati Reds upset the lops by overwhelming the Boston Braves. Red Lucas turned in a three hit pitching job to win the first battle 2 to 0, then Larry Benson gave Cincinnati some more effective pitching and the Reds hit nightly behind him to win the second 8 to 4. The game was stopped after six innings by rain.

Striblings Stage Radio Program From Fight Camp

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer
G AUGA LAKE, O.—(P)—Bill Stribling has a new heavy-weight playmate and a pudgy fellow named Frank Cavley, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and if their first training set to any indication of the kind of workouts to come, the southern challenger for Max Schmeling's heavy-weight title is in for a few busy evenings.

Cavley, a stablemate of Tommy Loughran and a boxer with a style faintly reminiscent of the Phantom of Philly, hove into camp here for the first time last night and immediately engaged Stribling in a two round workout. He was fat but he was clever and Bill discovered immediately that he could not belt Frankie around as he has the less experienced youngsters who have contracted to prepare the Prize of Man for his fifteen round match with Schmeling in the Cleveland Municipal Stadium the night of July 3.

No Luck With Right
Occasionally Stribling nailed his new spar mate with left hooks but he had hardly any luck at all with a straight right to the head, a punch that he has been neglecting in favor

The veterans took the lead as the game opened and then the score saw-sawed back and forth. With the count 4 and 3 for the Bankers in the fourth frame, Doc Fraxley pounded out a terrific home run to tie the score. The Bankers then pulled ahead in the last four innings and won the fracas easily.

The Legion got 12 hits, Lothar Graef getting three out of four. Lloyd Schroeder and Eddie Moller were hitting stars for the Bankers.

DEMOLAYS WIN 10-6

DeMolay softballers won the other league game last night defeating the Foresters in a fraternal loop battle, 10 and 6. The DeMolays had 13 hits and the Foresters six. Burkhans of the winners was the bat star with three out of four hits.

Woehler and Laird and Horton worked for the DeMolays and Beck and Kitzinger for the Foresters.

DRIVES ON NO. 7 AND HOLES OUT ON NO. 9

Stevens Point —(P)—John Kelley, Whiting Country club golfer, today had no fault whatsoever to find with the new golf ball. In fact, the new ball helped him achieve a record believed unique in the game—three holes in one.

And it was quite simple. Smacking a 225 yard drive from the No. 7 tee, the DeMolays had 13 hits and the Foresters six. Burkhans of the winners was the bat star with three out of four hits.

Monday night the Knights of Columbus and Holy Name team have scheduled a postponed Frat league game.

LABORDE AND LANDIS CLASH IN NET MEET

George LaBorde, one time member of the Lawrence college and university of Wisconsin tennis teams will clash with Dr. E. V. Landis in one of the semi-final rounds of the tennis tournament being held at the Y. M. C. A. courts. Two players representing the younger tennis element will clash in the lower bracket. They are Norman Clapp and William Cahall. The winner will meet the winner of the Landis-Laborde match for the city title.

Calling the Strikes

New York —(CPA)—Jim Bottomley has been called the snappiest first basemen in the major leagues and he isn't exactly minus his snap now. But he seems to be in hard luck. Some little physical affliction bit him, not seriously, just a nip and Jimmie Collins, who played first base for Rochester in 1930, now holds Sunny Jim's position on the St. Louis Cardinals.

Valley League Gossip

GREEN BAY finally chased the Poca-jinx by whipping the Papermakers, 3-2 in a sizzling combat at Kimberly. It was the first time since 1929 that Clusman & Co. has been able to notch a victory over Clarence Pocaan.

For the second time this season, Shawano took a fine lacing from Wisconsin Rapids. The Rapids' Indians' slabs went haw-haw in the mid-game and the Huberters breezed home to a 13-3 victory without trouble.

Michelson, the Electric City slabs, has been dropping some tough encounters. The Kaukauna club is hitting fairly well but the blows are not bunched when the bags are pulled. A batting order change might help.

Butcher Schabo, co-owner of the Appleton club, is taking his baseball pretty seriously this season. Between getting into uniform and staging banquets for his players, the Appleton club is taking his baseball pretty seriously this season.

KNOTT AND GEARIN GIVE MILWAUKEE 2 WINS OVER KERNS

Saint Paul Loses One and Again Goes into Tie for First Place

BY WILLIAM WEEKES
Associated Press Sports Writer
CINCINNATI —(P)—No hunt for St. Paul and Louisville were back in a tie for first place in the American association today.

The Colonels started the day yesterday leading the Saints by one and one half games but they took two on the chin from Milwaukee, while St. Paul was evening up its series with Columbus to bring another deadlock. The Brewers victories not only shook the Colonels down, but gave Milwaukee a two game gain on Minneapolis which suffered a pair of defeats at Toledo.

Milwaukee, which slipped back in the race during its recent series with Indianapolis, came to life yesterday and with Jack Knott pitching ball, shut Louisville out, 1 to 0, in the first game, and came right back behind old Dinty Gearin, to win the second contest, 4 to 2. Knott kept the Colonels' eight hits too far apart to permit scoring and Jack Taverne kicked in with a double to drive in Pete Turgeon with the only run of the game. Gearin gave only seven hits in the nightcap, while the Brewers thumped Guy Williams and Roy Wilkinson for twelve.

Saints Get 13 Hits
St. Paul combed Del Wetherell, Bill Kernode, the former Ohio State university hurler, and Marvin Gubert for 13 hits in walloping Columbus, 12 to 7. Morrissey got a double and three singles for the Saints, while Oscar Rootger and Jack Saltzger got homers. Pat Crawford and Wes King drove out circuit blows for the Red Birds.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees, attended the game, to watch, it was reported, the play of Saltzger, Saint second baseman. Saltzger hit well, but kicked in with a pair of errors.

Toledo staged a pair of late drives to overcome Minneapolis twice. They scored five runs in the last two innings of the first game to give Bill Ryan a 5 to 2 victory, and tied the score in the eighth and won in the tenth, 8 to 7, in the second contest. Ernie Wingard, the Mud Hens' all around man, received credit for the second victory although he was relieved by Jack Scott in the eighth.

Kansas City broke the winning streak of Emmett McCann's rejuvenated Indianapolis club, 4 to 2, behind Ed Holley's good pitching. Holley gave only six hits, one of which was a home run by Tommy Angley. The Athletics won in the ninth. Andy Griffin was the losing pitcher.

WRECKED PLANS

PONTIAC Ignoring the embarrassing situation into which he had entered, Pierre approached Bruce. Here's a little good-by present for you, old man," he said, extending his hand with a box.

Bruce silently took the box and, opening it, found a scarf pin.

"Thanks, Pierre," he said.

"Thought you'd like it," returned Pierre joyously. "Had to give it to you now 'cause I'll be leaving in the morning before you get back from Camden."

Ann said hurriedly with an effort to control her voice, "That reminds me, I must go and pack Bruce's bag."

Still crying she left the room.

Pierre and Bruce stood looking after her. Slowly Pierre turned to Bruce. "What's the trouble, Bruce?"

—What's Ann crying about?"

Bruce did not answer, but moved about uneasily. Pierre grew more and more disturbed. "What's the matter with you and Ann, Bruce?"

Bruce paused before Pierre and regarded him dubiously. "I'm not so sure that I ought to tell you."

"Why not?" Is Ann crying because of anything I've said or done?"

Bruce answered reluctantly: "In a way—yes. If you must know, Ann is feeling bad over my proposition to invest your money for you."

"But, Bruce, I told Ann not a half hour ago that I wouldn't let you nor any one else have that money to invest in anything. That's all settled."

"I know it is, Pierre, but Ann's been mighty good to you since you have been making your home with us, hasn't she?"

"She's been wonderful, Bruce. I have often wished I could make you both understand how grateful I am."

"Yeah? Well, it would mean a lot to Ann if I could get a start toward making some real money."

"Yes, of course."

"Pierre, if I have been too keen urging you to help me get in right on a really big thing and at the same time more than double your money for you, it's been on Ann's account. I don't mind for myself, pinching along like we have to on my measly bank-clerk salary, but it hurts so to see Ann slaving without even a woman to wash and iron for her. I don't want Ann to work herself to death like so many of these Orchard Hill women do. If she didn't love beautiful things like she does, if she wasn't the kind of things it wouldn't matter so much—but you know how fine Ann is. I'd like for Ann to have the home she dreams about and all that a woman like her deserves. And—well—she's counted so much I guess, on what this Nevada gold mine was going to do for her. We can't blame her if she's a bit upset over her disappointment."

"But, Bruce," cried Pierre desperately, "Ann has been urging me all along not to let you have my money. She wants me to go to school to prepare myself to be an actor, as I have always planned—as mother planned for me before she died."

"Sure, I know. That's Ann. She would make any sacrifice for you, Pierre. But just the same she feels it. I know I oughtn't to have told you, but she's crying because after all she's done for you and all she's been to you haven't seen your way to help me get that start in life that would mean so much to her. She thought you cared more for her—for us—that's all."

"Good Lord! Bruce, I never thought of it that way."

"That's what I've tried to tell Ann, Pierre. I told her you didn't realize what it would mean to her."

"That's right. I haven't realized what it would mean to Ann."

"I know you haven't, and she knows it too, but it hurts just the same."

"But I'm all packed to go in the morning!"

"You haven't bought your ticket yet."

"That's so. I suppose I could have my old soda fountain back."

"And you would go right on making your home with Ann and me. It isn't as if you were giving up your plans to go on the stage, Pierre; it's only putting it off a few months."

"Sure, I know. A year wouldn't make so much difference. Are you certain, Bruce, that this gold mining investment is all you say it is and that you won't need my money longer than a year?"

"If I wasn't sure do you think for a minute I would propose letting me invest your money in it?"

"But I haven't very much money, Bruce. I figure that there's barely enough for me to scrape through school and live until I can land some sort of a part in some play."

"I know what you have, Pierre. I looked up your account in our book. You drew it all out this afternoon too."

As if in a dream Pierre slowly drew a package of bills from his pocket and gave it to Bruce. "I never realized about Ann," he said.

Bruce, as he put the money in his pocket, said: "She would give me the devil if she knew I'd told you. You'll never regret this, Pierre, it will make us all rich."

"Yeah," returned Pierre. "I'm awfully glad I can do something for Ann."

Before they could say anything more Martin Bevis entered with hat and cane. "What's Camden train goes at 7:30, doesn't it, Bruce?"

"Seven forty," answered Bruce.

"Oh! Well, we can walk as far as the bank together. I've got to find that blasted 39 cents yet tonight."

Ann, coming in with the bag she had packed for Bruce, asked, "What time is it now, Pa?"

As Martin drew his watch from his pocket a massive old-fashioned Masonic charm came loose from the guard and fell to the floor. Martin cried: "I've dropped my Masonic charm," and began hunting for it.

Ann and Pierre went to Martin's assistance. Bruce moved to the desk at the farther end of the room and began hurriedly to write a letter.

"Here it is!" cried Ann, recovering the charm and giving it to her father.

The old bookkeeper handed the emblem fondly. "I wouldn't take a fortune for that," he said proudly. He handed it to Pierre.

Pierre, examining the charm, "Presented to Martin Bevis by his brother Masons in token of his services as Worshipful Master of Orchard Hill Lodge, number 36, November 30, 1893." "Fine!" said Pierre. "I don't wonder you think a lot of it."

Martin received the charm from Pierre's hand and regarded it with fond administration. Then he remarked: "The spring in this blessed snap is weak. That's how it come loose."

"Haden't you better leave it at home Pa, until you have it fixed?" asked Ann.

"No," Martin returned impatiently as he fixed the snap. "I have never been without this sacred emblem a minute. I'll just bend this spring a bit and it will hold all right until I get a new one. I never would find that 39 cents to balance my books tonight if I was to leave my lucky charm at home." He called to Bruce, "Come on, Bruce; it's time we were going if you expect to catch that train to Camden tonight!"

Bruce finished the letter he was writing, placed it in an envelope, which he sealed and put in his pocket.

"Goodbye, Ann—" he kissed her hurriedly.

"Goodbye, dear, you'll be sure to come home on the morning train, won't you?"

He laughed nervously and, turning hastily, offered his hand to Pierre. "Well, goodbye, old scout!"

Pierre, shocked at Bruce's manner and the indifference of his farewell, shook hands silently.

Bruce, with a laugh, caught up his bag and rushed after Martin.

Suddenly Pierre grasped the full import of the situation—Bruce was going away with his school money—his own plans to leave for New York in the morning were wrecked. Starting as if to run after Bruce, he called with quick excitement: "Bruce oh, Bruce—wait a minute. I—"

The tape measure that Pierre uses Monday cannot gauge the significance of the discovery to which it leads.

World production of copper in 1930 was about 14 per cent less than that of 1929, the total output amounting to 1,806,642 short tons, as compared with 2,104,110 short tons in 1929.

REACTION OF WORLD BACKS HOOVER PLAN

Washington Pleased With Enthusiastic Response to Proposal

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1931, by Post Pub. Co.
Washington—(CPA)—Although a favorable reaction was expected the truth is that the entire government here is pleasantly surprised by the extraordinary enthusiasm which has been evoked throughout the world by President Hoover's proposal of a holiday in war debt payments.

News that the security exchanges everywhere rose materially, coupled with the message of appreciation from business men everywhere, has sent hopes sky high here again just as the spirits of officials anxious for an upturn in business had sunk to despondency.

In the wave of approval that has come from the four corners of the earth, officials here perceive something more than was intended in the president's statement something more than a suspension of war debt payments for a year. For it is realized that if Germany cannot pay during the next fiscal year it is unlikely that she will be able in the short space of twelve months to resume payments or to pay anything on the year that will have been omitted. Something in the nature of a re-examination of the whole debt problem is confidently expected now, with the United States playing a more active role and willing to make sacrifices only if other nations are ready to do likewise.

American Position

The strength of the American position is but dimly appreciated now abroad. Hereafter when debt settlements had not yet been made it was a question of capacity to pay and the United States refused to consider European internal debts as having any bearing on the problem of what Europe should pay to America. Now, however, with all debt agreements specifically funded over a term of years, the question arises as to how to handle without scaling down the principal, the debt over longer than 68 years, possibly a hundred, so that the annuities may fall with less weight on the taxpayers of Germany and other countries.

The unexampled credit of the United States is, of course, the basic factor in that has been secured. A postponement of $246,000,000 in debt payments to America for a year, instead of a cutting of a substantial sum, which every year for five years until the world has recovered from the depression, would not make a dent in the credit of the United States, for it has taxed itself and retained nearly half of its debt in a decade—an extraordinary performance in world finance.

Don't Discuss Next Step

It is not considered politic here to discuss what the next step will be—whether a calling of an international conference of debts will be promoting the cause, or whether the nations will merely postpone the debt problem and have received such large support from both political parties that they will not relinquish the leadership and will gradually bring about a better relationship between governments on war debts.

It is hoped, too, that it better business results from the president's move there will no longer be any doubt in this country of the value of the argument that relief for the debt problem and has received such large support from both political parties that they will not relinquish the leadership and will gradually bring about a better relationship between governments on war debts.

From all parts of the United States messages are coming to the White House, telling of a changed psychology, of an atmosphere of confidence and real hope. From broad communications are even more buoyant, for the end is seen of the American policy of isolation and the beginning of a helpful policy of economic cooperation.

MEXICAN EXECUTED FOR INDIANA MURDER

Michigan City, Ind.—(CP)—Ignacio Saragoza, 26-year-old Mexican, worker South Chicago steel works, went to his death in the electric chair at the Indiana State prison today.

The penalty was imposed by the state after the murder of Charles Glafcke, a Michigan City policeman, last Dec. 14. Saragoza pleaded guilty. Saragoza was pronounced dead at 12:10 a. m. (central daylight time).

Attempts by members of the Mexican consulate to get Governor Lesonsky to intervene in Saragoza's behalf failed.

Saragoza was alleged to have stabbed the policeman as they waited for a patrol wagon to arrive, after Glafcke had arrested the Mexican.

Two representatives of the Mexican consulate at Chicago witnessed execution.

AUSTRALIAN WRITERS WAR ON U. S. MAGAZINES

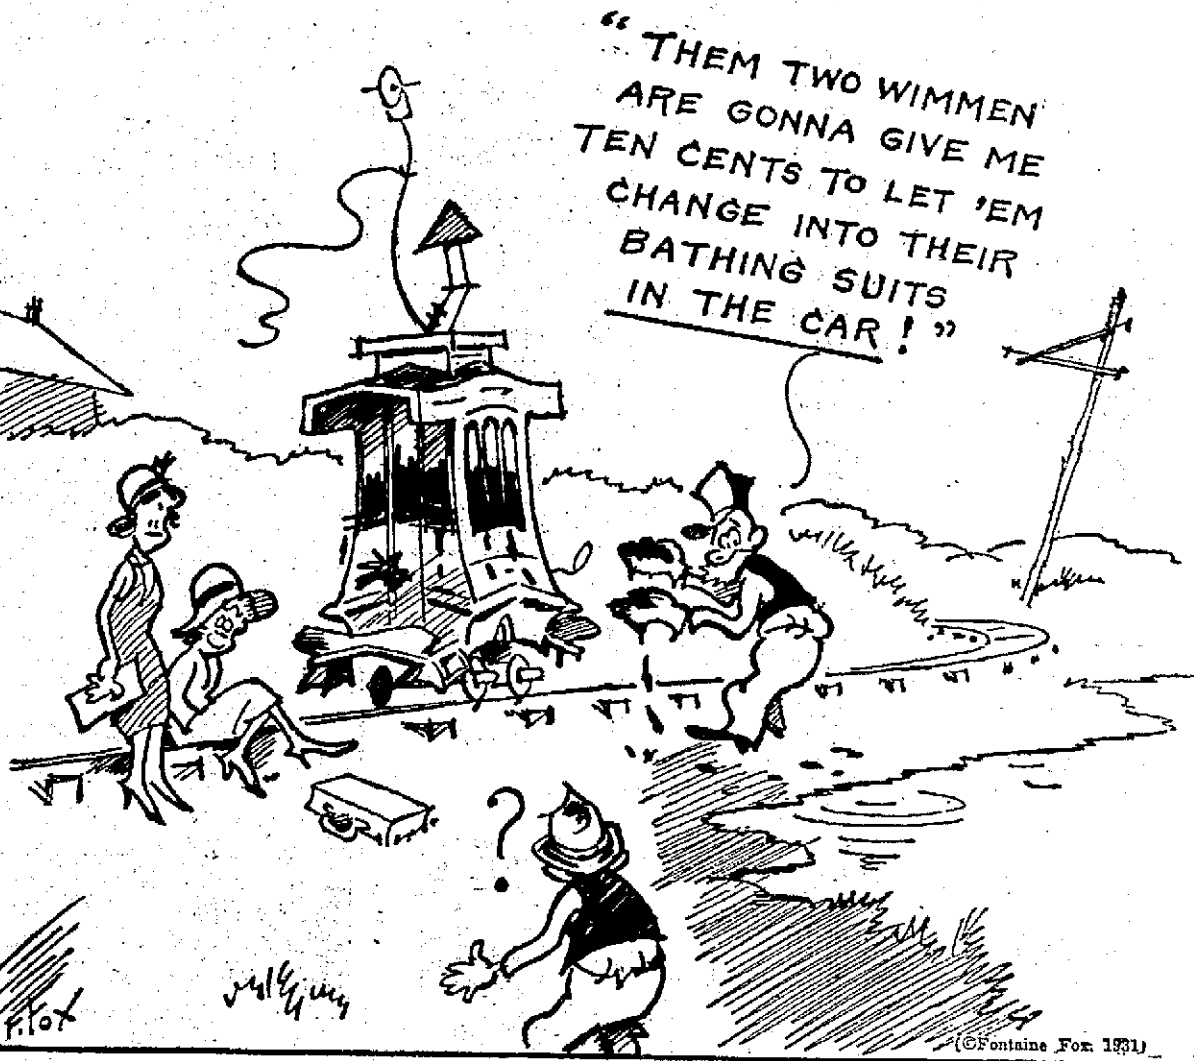

Canberra—(CP)—Authors and publishers are protesting against the "censorship" of black numbers of American periodicals in Australia. It is urged that the imported literature be treated fairly with Australian writers.

The Society of Australian Authors has issued a statement branding the contents of some of the periodicals as unsavory.

Peace Caravan Leader Is Experienced Campaigner

Washington—(CP)—Old Pennsylvania well knows what will happen to it Oct. 16, now that Miss Mabel Vernon is on caravan again. There'll be women with banners and an imposing array of petitions parading its length with the farfare of a coast-to-coast trail completed at the White House door.

True, Miss Vernon and her peace-parade have just started from Los Angeles with more than three months of desert heat and mountain chill intervening between them and their October date with Pennsylvania.

But Mabel Vernon, former suffrage campaigner, hasn't broken a date with her destination yet, and she has been coast-to-coast caravanning at intervals for the past 15 years.

Many a campaigner takes one city street with his pet petition and thinks he has done well when he gets to the end of it with his garnering of names. Miss Vernon takes a transcontinental highway, and for good measure, branches off into the byways.

Sixteen years ago she served as scout and trail blazer to a model caravan that was lost one whole day on the desert and was mired down in Kansas. But up Pennsylvania-ave it tooted on schedule with 500,000 signatures for woman's suffrage.

The next year Miss Vernon with 23 suffrage envoys retraced her trail by train. Again all the mayors of all the states got a personal visit and a chance to sign their names. In another three years that junk had become a bit dry, and some cities had shuffled the political cards and had new mayors. The indefatigable Miss Vernon was at them again, this time with a "prison special," featuring Miss Doris Stevens and some of her fellows who were, to quote the title of Miss Stevens' book on the subject, "Jailed for Freedom."

Suffrage came, but Miss Vernon caravanned on, making a coast-to-coast trip in 1928 in behalf of more women in congress. Through blizzards, rain and snow she battled for 44 days—and made her last engagement exactly on the date.

The sign-on-up method she used to help get the vote she is this summer turning to an effort to get rid of armaments. She hopes to see many more mayors than in 1916 because the roads are better.

On Tuesday, July 7, Monday Aug. 10, and Friday, Oct. 2, Miss Vernon's party will rest. On all other dates, mayors of California, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Maryland successively may be expected to call.

And President Hoover may be expected a set for petitions for peace to be put before the 1932 disarmament conference in Geneva.

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU.

"CANCER."
If June 25th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:50 a. m. to 10:55 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m., and from 7:10 p. m. to 9:05 p. m. The danger hours are from 11:10 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. and from 4:30 p. m. to 6:45 p. m.

June 25th, from an astrological standpoint, foretells unexpected changes, many of which will conduce to a betterment of conditions. Those who, in spite of the portents, persist in sticking to customs clothed in tradition will lose out in the long run. The winners will be those who accommodate their views to the exigencies of circumstances.

The child born on this June 25th, will, after a normal infancy, develop into a strong forceful adult. It will possess marked ability, and should be encouraged to specialize, rather than to diversify, its efforts. The stars predict that it would be successful in a material way. Affectionate, and not afraid to show it.

Born on June 25th, you are active and possess great capacity for work. You never waste your energy, and, although never idle, your efforts are all bent towards a settled aim and a definite object. You never tilt at windmills. Your ideals are quite high, and in serious attempting to live up to them, your life will not be a bed of roses. Tolerant of others' shortcomings, you never spare yourself, and are never satisfied with any individual effort that does not rank high.

Your circle of friends is a wide one, and this is largely attributable to the fact that, be you man or woman, you know how to, and can, keep a secret; no confidence reposed in you is ever divulged or betrayed. Your loyalty and sincerity are invaluable assets in your make-up. At times, you possess you, when pessimism and disappointment reign supreme. At such times, you are generally wise enough to fight it out with yourself and by yourself, without inflicting your imaginary worries and unjustified fears on others. Your horoscope suggests success in your chosen vocation, if you are permitted by circumstances to choose it. It also presages a happy home and a congenial family circle.

New York—(CPA)—Premier Pierre Laval of France, key man at a critical stage of President Hoover's world debt plan, is stubborn but can and will compromise on occasions. When he was a village schoolboy in central France, he was assailed by his mates for wearing loud neckties. He abandoned them, but insisted on wearing the then unconventional four-in-hand. He now wears loud four-in-hands.

M. Laval was once a village hack driver and is now described by French journalists as dressing "like a hack driver in his Sunday best"—heavy face, shrewd-eyed, untidy, with straggling, unkempt black hair. He interrupts state conferences to telephone his secretary, asking whether Yvonne has a calf, or whether Gaston, the pig, has recovered from his indisposition. A country lawyer—his hack horse knew the way, so he tied the lines on the dash board and studied law—Laval went to Paris in 1914. He was elected to the chamber of deputies in 1922 and to the senate in 1926, and was made premier early this year. He competes with President Doumer for the appellation "the Calvin Coolidge of France."

Bryn Mawr, by proxy, takes a hand in squelching New York gangsters. Miss Henrietta Addison, formerly a lecturer on social economy at the de luxe Pennsylvania women's college, now becomes head of the new crime prevention department.

Miss Addison is one of the most widely known and highly esteemed of American social workers, and her appointment by Mayor Walker is warmly commended. Born on a Georgia plantation near Atlanta, she received her master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1911. During the war she rendered valuable services on various important fronts, and later qualified as one of the nation's leading experts on juvenile delinquency. This writer asked a friend of Miss Addison's why so many southern girls make good in New York. "They have the best manners of any girls in America," was the reply. "Southern manners always win in New York."

Owen D. Young, applying the Midas touch to his native village of Van Hornesville, N. Y., building and dedicating for the old home town one of the most beautiful school buildings in America, has made a triple play on the Shakespearean adage.

4 CHURCH SERVICES
IN LIFE OF FRENCH
Paris—(CP)—More than half of the population of France goes to church but four times within a lifetime, say statistics collected by the Catholic Association of French Youth.

These four are baptism, first communion, marriage and death.

Only a fourth of the population remains faithful to its religion; an eighth lives entirely without religion.

The proportion of believers who go regularly to Sunday mass and Easter communion is placed at twenty-five percent.

ATLANTA MAYOR IN ATTACK ON DRY LAW ON RETURN TO U. S.

Welcomed by Huge Throng
Despite Recall Move
Started by His Foes

Atlanta—(CP)—Back at his office in the city hall today after a tour of France with a group of American mayors who were guests of the French government, Mayor James L. Key faced a recall movement and reiterated that prohibition is a "failure."

The criticism he voiced in Paris of prohibition in his homeland started circulation of petitions for his recall and aroused protests from preachers and others, but he was welcomed home last night with a parade that his friends said included 75,000 persons.

George Finch, attorney, said 3,000 voters had already signed the recall petition. Approximately 6,000 signatures are necessary for a recall election.

Mayor Key made no comment on the recall campaign, but revealed that before going to France he had investigated prohibition enforcement in New York by taking his 15-year-old daughter, Ruth, to a speakeasy. "I wanted her to see prohibition in the United States," he said. "The worst part of it is that they sold the liquor to an 18-year old schoolgirl and myself without asking any questions. We didn't drink the stuff, and they offered to return our money, which I refused, but the thought of selling liquor to a schoolgirl in violation of every principle of government should set some people to thinking."

"I was told by a prominent man there were 65,000 of such places in New York alone. Does anyone think there could be that many places where vile liquor is vended in one American city if the law was not a failure? I say no."

COMMITTEE APPROVES OF 14 CLASS A PERMITS

Recommendation that 14 Class A one bus, one theatre and two drain-lagoon permits be granted was made by the police and license committee at a meeting at city hall Tuesday afternoon.

The Class A applications approved by the committee were those of Joseph Recker, Ferdinand Reitzner, E. J. Gassner, Bud Fischer, L. E. Schreiter, William Garvey, Theodore Arnold, Floyd Coon, C. J. Nabbefeld, Arnold Schultz, Leo Schreiter, George Barrett, John Rechner and Oscar Gmeiner.

A theatre license for the Elite theatre, a bus permit for 20 buses for the Wisconsin Michigan Power company, and drain-lagoon licenses for Anton Greltzing and William Krause were also recommended.

Born great and achieving greatness, he has perhaps had more greatness "thrust upon him" than any other living American. Just a few minutes before press time, colleges which have given him honorary degrees are: Boston University, Union College, Tufts, Harvard, Dartmouth, Johns Hopkins, Colgate, Columbia, Yale, Rutgers Princeton, Lehigh, Bryn Mawr, University of the state of New York, Hamilton College, University of California and New York university. His degree from St. Lawrence was an "earned run."

A Boston lawyer, he became counsel for the General Electric Co. and thereafter board chairmanships grew like jungle growth. With this plethora of fame and fortune, he says: "I am not in politics, and anyone who prevents me from receiving the nomination for president will be doing me a favor."

WORLD'S LONGEST LOVER'S
LANE
Bordeaux, France—The world's longest lover's lane is found between this city and Le Havre, a distance of 425 miles.

This lane is the highway "Route Nationale," and it is constantly the Mecca for young swains and their girl friends. The reason is that all along the length of the road are huge trees on which mistletoe grows in profusion. Several accidents have resulted from young men taking advantage of the presence of the mistletoe and removing their eyes from the road.

The French government has ruled that mistletoe is a parasite, however, and discourages its cultivation. This law may do away with the numerous accidents, but most romantic couples would rather the mistletoe remained.

This Looks Like a Love Match

Clara Bow said the other day she didn't intend to marry for a year, but take a look at this picture. Clara seems rather blissfully happy in the arms of Rex Bell, screen actor. She is now recuperating from her recent illness at Bell's Nevada ranch.

New American Grand Opera Omits Overture For Speed

New York—(CP)—Sixteen bars of dynamic brass, vibrant percussion and singing strings—and the curtain goes up on the newest of American grand operas, Deems Taylor's three-act "Peter Ibbetson."

"Why should there be an overture?" inquired the 45-year-old composer, known not only for the music he writes but also for the things he has said about music other people write.

"An overture would merely slow down the piece. There are nearly three hours of music as it is, and all of it is employed to carry the action of the play rapidly along."

Not only in the treatment of his music, but in his approach to the question of opera.

"In other days," he said, "there were no radios, no phonographs, no symphony concerts, no song recitals, no movies. Those who sought entertainment in music found it in opera. Opera, therefore, had to provide symphony, recital and spectacle."

"Now it is not necessary. Those who wish to hear the best voices may do so by attending recitals. Those who wish spectacle may find it in the cinema. Those who favor symphonic music may hear it in the concert hall and on the radio."

"The changing situation has created a changed field for opera. It has made more and more necessary the application to opera of sound 'theater.' There must be an interesting, compelling story, and above all the music must be a constant asset instead of a retarding element, as so often is the case in grand opera."

"Peter Ibbetson" was written by Taylor on commission from the Metropolitan opera house following the success in 1927 of his first opera, "The King's Henchman."

The funds in his new opera are taken by Lawrence Tibbett, Edward Johnson and Lucrozla Borj.

Milwaukee—(CP)—Wiley Post, aviator on a flight across the Atlantic today with Harold Gatty, is known personally to several Wisconsin citizens in aviation circles. He accompanied the national reliability tour to the state in 1929, being the first of the fliers to ground here from Wausau, making the distance in 59 minutes.

BULLS CONTROL MOVEMENTS OF STOCK MARKET

New York Issues Sweep Upward With Renewed Vigor—Report Big Gains

BY CLAUDE A. JACGER
Associated Press Financial Editor
New York — (AP) — Bullishness bloomed again in world financial markets today.
New York stocks swept upward with a vigor equalling that of Saturday and Monday. The amazing reversal of sentiment inspired by the war debt proposal showed no signs of wavering, despite the fact that some of the mid-week business statistics were distinctly unfavorable and reports that French acceptance of the debt plan involved various conditions.
Advances ranged from 2 to more than 12 points, with American Tobacco issues making the maximum gains, on news of higher wholesale cigarette prices. Radio Corp. surged up about 5 points on news that the Federal Radio commission has at last decided to renew broadcasting licenses to the station, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Sears Roebuck, Case and others advanced more than 4 points. Pennsylvania gained more than 2, as shorts covered on the reduction of the quarterly dividend from $1 to 75 cents.

The wavering of the markets yesterday appeared merely to have provided a breathing spell. Bonds improved and a new offering of $35,000,000, the Commonwealth Edison issue, was the largest since April. Financial temper has so changed that bankers are becoming optimistic over a revival of foreign lending in the market. A bond issue of about $20,000,000 for the Island of Formosa, to be guaranteed by the Japanese government, is expected shortly. Excepting Canadian issues, this will be the first sizable foreign issue in a long time.
The way the stock market was able to pass over the reduction of the Pennsylvania railroads dividend contrasted with the abrupt decline caused by New York Central cuts a few months earlier. Brooks who were insisting a week ago that the market had already discounted the expected advance developments of summer advances, say "I told you so." The weekly freight car loadings figures were such as might have caused considerable gloom, a week ago. The drop of 25,437 cars from the previous week was unusually large for the second week of June. Steel ingot output was estimated in the weekly reviews to have receded from about 38 to around 36 or 35 per cent of capacity.

The market had much to give it cheer, however. Unlike Pennsylvania railroad, Westinghouse Electric provided a pleasant surprise by ordering its regular quarterly payment of $1,200,000 in cash and copper prices. We again advanced, making total gains of a cent a pound so far this week. Optimism continues to gain in the petroleum industry. An increase in mid-continent crude prices is expected shortly and weekly statistics showed a reduction of more than 1,000,000 barrels in gasoline stocks despite a gain in crude production.
The fresh violence of the advance in stocks again caused some misgivings among more conservatively inclined brokers, who pointed out that the market is, at best, faced with an extremely quiet summer in industrial activity. However, the sold stocks yesterday in expectation of a sharp secondary reaction, were driven to cover at costly prices.

BULLS CONTROL MOVEMENTS OF STOCK MARKET

New York Issues Sweep Upward With Renewed Vigor—Report Big Gains

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York (P)—Bullishness bloomed again in world financial markets today.

New York stocks swept upward with a vigor equalling that of Saturday and Monday. The amazing reversal of sentiment inspired by the war debt proposal showed no sign of wavering. Despite the fact that some of the mid-week business statistics were distinctly unfavorable and reports that French acceptance of the debt plan involved various conditions.

Advances in shares ranged from 2 to more than 12 points, with American Tobacco issues making the maximum gains. Prices of higher, wholesale cigarette prices. Radio Corp. surged up about 5 points on news that the Federal Radio commission has at last decided to renew licenses. Westinghouse Electric, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Sears Roebuck, Case and others advanced 4 to 6 points. Pennsylvania gained more than 2, as shorts covered on the reduction of the quarterly dividend from $1 to 75 cents.

The wavering of the markets yesterday appeared merely to have provided a breathing spell. Bonds improved and a new offering of $55,000,000, the Government's new issue, was the largest since April.

Financial temper has so changed that bankers are becoming optimistic over a revival of foreign lending in this market. A bond issue of about $20,000,000 for the Island of Formosa, to be guaranteed by the Japanese government, is expected shortly.

European issues, this will be the first sizable foreign issue in a long time. The way the stock market was able to pass over the reduction of Pennsylvania's dividends contrasted with the abrupt decline caused by New York's central cuts a week earlier. Brooklyn who were insisting a week ago that the market had already discounted the expected advance developments of summatance to say "I told you so." The weekly freight car loadings figures were such as might have caused considerable gloom, a week ago. The drop of 25,487 cars from the previous week was unsparingly large for the second week of June. Steel input output was estimated in the weekly reviews to have receded from about 88 to around 86 or 85 per cent of capacity.

The market had much to give it cheer, however. Unlike Pennsylvania's railroad, Westinghouse Electric provided a pleasant surprise by ordering its regular quarterly payment of $1. Both lead and copper prices were again advanced, making total gains of 2 cent a pound so far this week. Optimism continues to gain in the petroleum industry. An increase in mid-continent crude prices is expected shortly and weekly statistics showed a reduction of more than 1,000,000 barrels in gasoline production, despite a gain in crude production.

The fresh violence of the advance in stocks again caused some conservative investors, who pointed out that the market is at best speculative, with an extremely quiet summer in industry. STOCK MARKET RISE IMPROVES BANKS, TRUSTS

Showing for Quarterly Reports to Be Improved Considerably

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright, 1931, by Cons. Press
Wall Street, New York.—The rise in all classes of securities since Friday will be a blessing to the investment trusts in improving the position of their portfolios, which are made up on the basis of values on June 30. It will likewise be gratifying to banks and trust companies that carry a substantial investment account, on which the depreciation early this month was a serious matter but which has been materially reduced by the market events of the last few days.

The investment trusts, until the end of last week, were facing market conditions that would have reduced the values in their portfolios by substantial dollar amounts. They had in the March quarter some of the benefits of the rise in stocks during January and February. This put them in a more comfortable position than they had been at the end of December, 1930. The decline in common stocks particularly, between the end of March and the middle of June, made their situation even worse than it was six months ago. Therefore, the advance that has taken place recently, even allowing for Tuesday's reaction and a possibility of further adjustment before the end of the month, will make the showing of the trusts, whose reports are issued quarterly, more pleasing to shareholders than had been anticipated earlier.

All Trusts Improve
As an illustration, one general management investment trust with a portfolio of about 25,000 shares of common stocks distributed among a group of 24 companies, showed Tuesday an appreciation of between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 compared with the low prices of the year reached on June 2. The list is a typical one and reflects the general averages of advance, with no stocks making spectacular gains. This rise in value amounts to between 10 and 12 per cent on the total cost of the investments held in the company's portfolio. It does not by a considerable amount bring the total market value of the investments up to book value but it materially reduces the wide gap between the two figures.

Those general management investment trusts that have made large purchases of foreign dollar bonds, as well as of currency bonds, have had the benefit the last two days of the great buoyancy in both types of securities. They have held principally German government and corporation dollar issues, German bank stocks and the internal bonds of various German municipalities and industrial companies.

All of these securities have recovered sharply, relieving the investment trusts of the embarrassment of publishing values at the price levels which prevailed in securities less than a week ago.

The effect on the fixed trusts, whose lists of stocks are limited in number compared with those of the general management trusts, has been to mark up the selling price of their units, many of which had gone below the level at which these shares had been distributed in large amount to the public.

Aids State Banks
The general appreciation in common stocks and in foreign dollar bonds, as well as in the various railroad bonds which were in a demoralized state early this month, means a great deal to state banks and trust companies which are permitted to carry common stocks as well as bonds in their portfolios. The call by the national bank and state bank departments will probably be for a statement of condition as of June 30. Prior to this date the banks usually do a certain amount of what is known as "window dressing." This has been done for them by the market in its sharp uprush since Friday. The banks, however, do not realize the advantage of the market turn to the same extent as the investment trusts, since the greater part of their

MOST FOODS TASTE BETTER IF COOKED IN SMALL AMOUNTS

Same is True of Hills Bros. Coffee, Which is Never Roasted in Bulk

When food is cooked in small quantities, the mixing, the application of heat, can be controlled with much more exactness. An omelet, for example, made of three eggs will turn out more tender and fluffier than one made of many eggs.

A similar situation occurs in roasting coffee. When roasted in bulk it is impossible to control the heat exactly. Some of the batch, therefore, is overdone and some underdone. As a result there is a variation in flavor.

In the invention of Controlled Roasting, Hills Bros. found the way to insure an even roast in their fine blend of coffee. Only a few pounds at a time are roasted by this patented continuous process. When the roasting is finished a uniformly delicious flavor has been developed such as no other coffee has.

When you buy Hills Bros. Coffee it is always fresh because it is packed in vacuum. By this process, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken from the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh. Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab on the can.

DRY WEATHER WILL CUT FLOW OF MILK

Madison—(AP)—Already lower than last year milk production per cow in Wisconsin may see a further decline if dry weather continues, Walter Ebling, agricultural statistician, announced here today.

The average production per cow was 22.7 pounds on June 1 as compared with 23.2 pounds on the same date last year. Only New York state reported a higher production than that in Wisconsin. Production per cow for the United States averaged holdings are in bonds rather than in common stocks.

They benefit mainly from the appreciation in German bonds and in the better prices that have been quoted for South American issues in sympathy with the change in the market attitude toward central European affairs.

17.6 pounds on June 1 as compared with 18.2 pounds a year ago.

At the beginning of the present month, pasture conditions were about the lowest on record for this time of the year, Mr. Ebling said. The new seedlings of grass and clover seed for hay and pasture are in poor condition and as a result the pasture situation will probably be below normal all summer, especially if the existing shortage of moisture in the soil continues, he said. Most weather stations in Wisconsin show below normal rainfall thus far and this following the dry year of 1930 will probably reduce summer milk production a great deal, the agricultural statistician said.

PUT SAVINGS INTO SECURITIES WITH ASSURED RETURNS

This Rule Has Caused Big Demand for U. S. Government Bonds

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES
(Copyright 1931 by Cons. Press)

New York.—The normal sequence of events in reviving security market after a long depression is for bonds and preferred stocks to lead the way. What generally happens is that accumulated capital seeking safety above everything else first finds its way into obligations the return on which is assured beyond question. That is the reason that U. S. Government bonds have been in such urgent demand of late with a consequent falling off in the yield.

Eventually investors, dissatisfied with small return on the highest grade descriptions, turn to those just a trifle below the best and the movement gradually extends downward until it reaches the extremely speculative type of stock. Now two or three years ago the theory gained wide acceptance that the only profitable investment was the equity in the enterprise, that is to say the common stock to which all the profits went after the bondholders and the preferred shareholders had been satisfied. That was the basis for the wild bull market of 1928 and 1929 with results so well known that they do not need to be reviewed here.

The question now is what shall we do with our savings if and when income from the highest grade of investment become inadequate for our needs. Shall we jump right back to common stocks, expecting the market to indulge in another orgy of rising prices or shall we learn from experience and put hard earned money into something conservative eschewing speculation? We know what we ought to do but the gambling instinct is inherent in most of us.

For the minority who will take the safe course, and incidentally who will surely profit thereby whatever may happen to the majority, it is in order to say at this time that the best results will be achieved by going slow. If the savings bank reduces the interest rate on deposits, says from 4 per cent to 3 per cent, there are plenty of bonds perfectly sound which will give more than the savings bank paid at its best. There is not much thrill about buying them nor about watching the quotations in the newspapers and yet if precedent holds they will surely sell higher as business recovers.

STATE SUPREME COURT STARTS ITS VACATION

Madison—(AP)—The state supreme court today began its annual vacation which will last until court is resumed next September.

When the court announced the last decisions yesterday afternoon, virtually all of the 200-odd cases on the January term calendar had been disposed of in addition to 63 cases which were carried over from the August term.

For the first time in two years, the court had a full membership during the term just ended. During the Kohler administration the court's personnel was cut at various times by death or resignation.

Before adjourning for the summer, the court admitted approximately 65 graduates of the University of Wisconsin law school to the Wisconsin bar.

Dublin—A bill has finally passed the Free State Dail, after attempts dating away back to the early history of Ireland, to give the land back to the people. Large estates will be split up into small farms and transferred from the landlords to the tenants, the Gosgrove government meeting the cost of about $50,000,000 by an issue of land bonds.

Construction of the Faultless Nobelt waistband: a broad, flat band of live sheet rubber, encased in resilient webbing, attached with an expanding stitch. This sheet rubber gives equal resilience to the entire band and the rubber is under no tension until you put on the garment. This results in the gentle, even pressure that can scarcely be felt by the wearer. Unlike ordinary rubber, it is protected by an anti-oxidant, which prevents oxidation and deterioration, and withstands even the most severe wear. The long life makes possible the sweeping and unqualified Faultless guarantee.

Construction of waistband made from ordinary elastic: note that the only resilience is supplied by a few rubber threads. In order that these rubber threads may supply sufficient tension, they are stretched about 100% before they are placed in the waistband. Thus each rubber thread is under a constant strain, whether the garment is being worn or not. Since the only pressure is in the rubber threads, these rubber threads cut into the flesh, causing discomfort and irritation, and leaving marks upon the skin.
